

MEMORIAL DAY FITTINGLY
OBSERVED IN THIS CITY

Old Veterans Step is Halting and Ranks are Fast Thinning Out---Many Have Answered the Bugle's Last Call

Graves of Loved Comrades are Strewn With Beautiful Flowers---Parade Which Occurred
This Morning Led by Police.

At an early hour Saturday morning the streets of the city began filling up around the public square, and at 8:00 o'clock the decorating company for Mt. Calvary---Capt. John Hiser in charge---proceeded in wagons to the cemetery, where the graves of the dead heroes, who are buried there, were decorated, after which the contingent returned to Memorial hall.

At 9:30 the column for Cedar Hill formed with right resting at center of North Park, and left on North Second street. The formation was as follows:

1. Squad of police.
2. Chief Marshal Homer D. Place and mounted staff, as follows: Maj. Elmer Blizard, chief of staff; F. C. King, Wm. Holler, James McVey, A. G. Wyeth, Captain W. C. Miller, I. N. Phillips and Dr. W. H. Knauss.
3. Orator of the day, Rev. W. H. Rice of Gadenhutton, department chaplain of Ohio G. A. R. Mexican War Veterans and aged Civil War Veterans in carriages, City and County Officials.
4. Co. G, Fourth Regiment, O. N. G., Capt. Milton Monnette commanding.
5. Field music, Drum and Fife Corps.
6. Lemert Relief Corps and flower girls and boys.
7. Spanish War Veterans.
8. Unorganized soldiers and Sons of Veterans.
10. Civic organizations.

One of the most pathetic sights in the procession was that of the three survivors of the Mexican War who live in Lucking county, Messrs. Daniel Darlington, Leonard Stelzer, and Henry Fleming, all residents of Newark. They occupied a handsomely decorated carriage and attracted a great deal of attention.

The column moved at 10:00 a. m. sharp and marched around the square to East Main street, thence to Cedar Hill cemetery, halting on north and east sides of the mound. Soldiers not able to march beyond First street took the city cars at that point and rejoined the column at the southeast cemetery gate. Upon halting, the column was divided into nine decorating companies and each company proceeded to place flowers on each grave in the division to which it is assigned. The following list was the schedule for this work:

Senior Captain in charge---F. G. Steele.

Division A, 55 graves---Co. A, Captain F. C. King; aid, M. B. Snider.

Division B, 59 graves---Co. B, Captain J. R. Ashbrook; aid, Charles S. Osborn.

Divisions C and D, 57 graves---Captain G. W. Chase; aid, I. N. Phillips.

Division E, 62 graves---Co. E, Captain O. E. Hunt; aid, M. R. Davidson.

Divisions F and G, 52 graves---Co. F, Capt. Elmer Blizard; aid, Lieut. Lyman Beecher.

Division H, 65 graves, G. A. R. lot---Capt. W. A. Lovett; aid, Sergeant Chas. Baker.

Division I, 41 graves---Co. I, Capt. M. O. Nash; aid, J. F. Brison.

Division J, 48 graves---Co. J, Capt. B. F. Ford; aid, Lieut. Harry W. Brown.

Division K, 20 graves---Capt. M. Monnette; aid, J. B. Crabbin.

Flower depot---Col. Cliff H. Rosebrough in charge.

Each company was accompanied by a member of the Relief Corps and a small squad of flower girls and boys.

Each captain, after decorating his division conducted his company to the flower depot, where flowers were strewn in memory of the soldier dead in unknown graves who are entitled to rest in Newark cemeteries. This duty performed, all the companies marched to the mound.

The ceremonies at the mound consisted of prayers by Rev. W. W. Trout, reading of Lincoln's Address at Gettysburg, by B. F. McDonald, firing of farewell salute by Co. G. sounding "Lights Out" by Co. G's buglers, benediction.

At the conclusion of the exercises awaiting them in the eternal bivouac, gazes down on them as they move in pathetic procession.

And so each year some of these grizzled men fail to answer the memorial call. They have been mustered out at last, and every year, on May 30, we notice the extent of this silently and slowly progressing tragedy, which in but a few, comparatively few, years, will leave Memorial Day without a remnant of the original blue.

The total number of survivors is now 629,000. This figure is obtained as follows: The last official enrollment made by the pension authorities at Washington, June 20, 1907, was 644,328. Deducting 2500 a month, for nine intervening months, there were 22,000 deaths.

The Old Guard is dying off at the rate of 90 a day, but the death losses for each month are often higher. In 1906, Grand Army survivors died to the number of 13,208, and in 1907 the loss was 31,291, for the year that closes June 1, 1908, the death rate will be unquestionably between 37,000 and 37,000, if not higher. CONGRESSMAN
ASHBROOK

Would Support Bill Prohibiting Unjust Discrimination by Courts Regarding Labor.

Mr. J. H. Sharritt, secretary of the Barbers' Union, this city, has just received from Hon. W. A. Ashbrook, the following regarding a communication addressed to him stating the action of a mass meeting of working men held in this city on April 19, for the purpose of taking action on courts regarding organized labor. The letter reads as follows:

Washington, D. C., May 23, 1908.

J. H. Sharritt, Esq., Newark, O.: Dear Sir---Yours of the 12th just received. I am not sure what union the same represents, as you neglected to affix the seal. I should like to have you advise me by return mail so that I may properly present and file the same. In the meantime, I beg to assure you that I am in favor of the legislation mentioned in the resolutions and would cheerfully support the same. If the party in power would permit these bills to be brought before the House. There is no likelihood that this will be done. Trusting that I will hear from you by return mail and thanking you for calling my attention to your wishes I am

Very respectfully,

WM. A. ASHBROOK.

County Recorder Arrested Friday For Passing Worthless Checks in Columbus.

Mt. Vernon, May 30---County Recorder Charles S. Snow was arrested in this city Friday morning by Detective Davis of Columbus at the instance of the police department of that city. Mr. Snow is charged with passing worthless checks in Columbus.

The warrant was served on Mr. Snow by the detective Friday morning at 9 o'clock and it was the intention to take him to Columbus on the 9:50 train to answer to the charge, but the wreck of that train in Mt. Vernon thwarted the detective's plan.

While the detective was waiting here to take the 12:15 train to Columbus with his man, W. A. Hosack, attorney for Mr. Snow, appeared at the office of Probate Judge Berry and obtaining a writ of habeas corpus took the prisoner away from the detective and consequently Snow was not taken over to Columbus to answer to the charge.

LIFE SENTENCE
IS GIVEN BAKER
BY THE COURT

Philippi, W. Va., May 30---Judge Dayton last night sentenced Jas. A. Baker to prison for life for tampering with the mails and the murder of Edward Y. Hutchinson at Charleston. Baker himself made an impassioned appeal for leniency, claiming innocence. He was taken to the Moundsville prison today.

Grand Army

SCULPTOR J. MASSEY

RHIND of New York is working on a monument to commemorate the founder of the Grand Army of the Republic, Dr. Benjamin Franklin Stephenson of Springfield, Ill. The monument, a three sided obelisk, is to be erected in Washington at the junction of Louisiana and Second and Seventh and C streets, in the middle of a circular grass plot, and it is to be ready for dedication about Aug. 1, 1909 when there will be an encampment of the Grand Army to unveil it. Congress has appropriated $10,000 and G. A. R. men have raised about $25,000 additional, so that the monument will be a splendid creation.

Dr. Stephenson was regimental surgeon of the Fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry during its three years of service in the west. His rank was that of major. He was born in Wayne county, Ill., in 1822 and died in 1871. Dr. Stephenson grew up in Sangamon county and lived passing worthless checks in Columbus.

GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC

DECATUR, ILL.

AT THE CORNER OF

LOUISIANA AND SECOND

STREETS, NEWARK, OHIO

TO BE DEDICATED

ABOUT AUGUST 1, 1909

THE MONUMENT

IS A THREE SIDED

Society

Mrs. C. H. Stimson was hostess to the Cavendish club on Wednesday afternoon.

The Tuesday Bridge club was entertained this week by Mrs. George Blood at her home in Hudson avenue.

Many have received cards reading as follows:
Mrs. Henry Sachs
Thursday, June fourth
Thrice to six
397 Hudson avenue
Miss McMahon.

Mr. Charles Graff entertained with a euchre and smoker at his North Fifth street home Wednesday evening. It was a stag event, and the game of cards was spiritedly contested, the fortunate contestants being Mr. E. A. Miller and Mr. George Maybold. An appetizing luncheon was served the following: Messrs. C. J. Pierri, Frank Snyder, Wm. Form, Lewis Cosh, Charles Rielly, Bernard Rielly, E. J. McCarthy, G. A. Besancon, H. Rogers, Willis Sachs, E. A. Miller, George Maybold, G. F. Streams, P. B. Smythe.

Mrs. C. H. Hollander was hostess to the Tuesday afternoon Bridge club at the home of Miss Romaine Stanberry on Locust street on the club day. The guests' trophy was awarded Miss Alice Dennis, while the souvenirs of the club were received by Mrs. Frank Webb and Mrs. R. M. Davidson.

The guests of the afternoon were: Mrs. W. A. Davis, Mrs. J. J. Carroll, Mrs. Daniel Altschul, Mrs. E. T. Johnson, Mrs. Frank Bolton, Misses Alice Dennis, Romaine Stanberry and Miss Ella Grant of Mt. Vernon, Mrs. King of Watkins Glen, N. Y., and Mrs. Smiley of Cleveland.

On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Warden entertained at the hotel with a very pretty dinner party. The private dining room was beautiful in the color scheme of red. Peonies were used in profusion and a centerpiece of great beauty was created of the favored flowers. The blooms were strewed the length of the table.

A menu of seven courses was served in a faultless manner, place cards seating the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. Carl Norpell, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Besuden, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Altschul, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Heisey, Mr. Webb.

A very pretty reception was given on Friday afternoon by Mrs. Fred Evans at her home in Hudson avenue. The hours were from four until six and the residence was cleverly arranged with flags and flowers in harmony with the near holiday.

Mrs. Evans was assisted in receiving and serving throughout the many rooms by Miss Lemert of Columbus, Mrs. David Cordray, Mrs. Cordray of Augusta, Ga., Mrs. Trembley of Columbus and Mrs. Henry Woodbridge, Mrs. T. A. Cosgrove, Mrs. T. M. Edmiston, Mrs. Chase, Mrs. Hopkins and Miss Souder.

Refreshments were served during the hours in the house, while the ices were served in the yard, and all appointments were in keeping with the decorations.

Presiding at the punch bowl were Misses Helen Chase and Mary Pollett. About seventy-five ladies called during the afternoon.

Hetuck Chapter, D. A. R., held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. S. C. Priest on North Fifth street. The occasion was rendered noteworthy by the presence of the State Regent, Mrs. Orton of Columbus. The following program was given: Singing of America by Chapter, Lord's Prayer by Chapter, Address by Mrs. Orton, Song by Mrs. Channing Tucker, Song by Mrs. Charles Miller. Mrs. Orton said in part: The business of the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution is carried on by committees. First is the committee on Continental Hall. Continental Hall is being built by the National society as a memorial to their Revolutionary ancestors. It contains the library of the society, and Continental congress convenes annually in the large auditorium.

A second committee is that on patriotic education. This work was begun in Buffalo among the foreigners and has extended to other lines. The Buffalo chapter expends $1,500 annually on this work alone.

This committee has been instrumental in passing the juvenile court law and the child labor law. Ohio has the best child labor law in the United States.

Other committees are: Committee on American Monthly Magazine, the official magazine of the society; on the children of the republic, teaching good citizenship to children of the schools; on home gardens and on marking and preserving graves of soldiers and historical sites.

At the close of the program refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour was spent. The guests of the chapter were Mrs.

Orton of Columbus, Mrs. Ferguson, Mrs. Helmes and Miss Munroe of Greenville, Mrs. Fulton, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Zeublin, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. McNealey, Mrs. Tucker, Mrs. Sanger, Miss Cosgrove, Miss Wotring and Miss Lisle.

TWO NIGHTS

Newly Wed Boy and Girl Sat in Railroad Station Floor Bound—Dad in Pursuit.

McMester, Okla., May 29.—Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Youngs, of Wickerville, Ark., wed only a few hours, when time they spent on a train, the excitement of prying eyes, set in the railway station here through two long, long nights, food bored, and gazed yearningly at each other's eyes. The hotel was full and the newly-wed ones were compelled to spend the nights on benches.

They were also in fear of the bride's father, the sheriff of Wickerville, who was on their trail. The girl was in short dresses, though the boy, only 19, said she was 18.

The couple eventually reached the home of Youngs' grandparents, near Rhea, Okla., safe.

THE TRIE TEST.

Tried in Newark. It Has Stood the Test.

The hardest test is the test of time, and Doan's Kidney Pills have stood it well in Newark. Kidney sufferers can hardly ask for stronger proof than the following:

C. L. Starr, 89 Hancock street, Newark, Ohio, says: "I have had no occasion to retract anything from the statement I made in 1904, recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, as the cure they performed at that time has remained permanent. Prior to using this remedy I suffered for years from kidney complaint and backache and although I used numerous remedies, I was unable to obtain relief. I had a constant pain across my loins and if I attempted to stoop my suffering was greatly increased and if I sat in one position for any length of time, it was almost impossible for me to rise. Hearing of Doan's Kidney Pills I procured a box at Crayton's drug store and was agreeably surprised at the quick way in which they disposed of my backache and improved my condition in every way. My wife seeing the benefit that I had obtained from the use of this remedy, began its use and obtained satisfactory results. I am always glad to say a few words in favor of Doan's Kidney Pills."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

TAKES FAMILY ACROSS CONTINENT IN AUTO.

THE MURDOCK FAMILY IN PACKARD CAR.

New York, May 29.—With only one puncture on the route, Jacob M. Murdock, a wealthy lumberman of Johnston, Pa., drove his family in a Packard touring car across the continent in 23 days. He left Pasadena, Cal., at eight o'clock on the evening of April 29, and arrived at Broadway and Sixty-seventh street at five minutes past two o'clock, May 28. This total elapsed time was 23 days.

With Mr. Murdock were his wife, two daughters and a son, the last ten years of age, and the youngest of John; P. W. Spaulding of Houston, Wyo., a mechanic, making seven in the car. The route followed was via Goldfield, Ogden, Cheyenne, Chicago, Toledo, Pittsburg and Philadelphia, and Mr. Murdock's odometer registered 5,975 miles at the finish. The party rested five Sundays and two other days, making their actual driving time 23 days. Their longest day's run was of 24 miles from Johnston, Pa., to Philadelphia, and their shortest was 67 miles from Los Angeles to Hot Springs, Mr. Murdock drove only during the daylight hours.

The equipment of the car included a shovel and spade, boards for crossing ditches, a cooking stove and camp outfit for use in the prairies. On the trip 540 gallons of gasoline were consumed. The run was the first across the continent by a whole family.

SMOTHERS LIPS WITH HIS KISSES

After Shooting the Woman Christie Kills Himself Before a Mirror at Piqua.

Piqua, O., May 29.—My love for you is driving me mad," shrieked Frank Christie when, clasping Mrs. E. A. F. Peckham by the arm he dragged her to a rear door of her home, and demanded that she desert her husband, Harry Peckham, and flee with her captor.

Though it is a pity that the wife and Christie had been lovers for weeks, despite the fact that her husband believed her the personification of faithfulness, she refused to desert him.

Drawing a revolver, a satanic smile overspreading his face, Christie sent a bullet into his wife's forehead. As she fell he fled again, the bullet entering her left side. Still motionless, she lay on the floor, the bullet shot, fired as she lay writhing on the floor, tore through her left arm.

Then Christie bent over the dying woman, took her in his arms, and kissed her bloody forehead and again. With the coolness of a man about to adjust his cravat, Christie then walked to a mirror, placed the muzzle of his weapon against his left temple and pulled the trigger. He died instantly.

When neighbors, attracted by the shot, rushed into the house, Mrs. Peckham was still conscious. She managed to gasp out the details of the shooting. Then she collapsed, and attending physicians say she cannot recover.

Peckham, the husband of Christie's victim, was at his duties some distance from his home when the tragedy took place.

He was astounded when he learned the cause of the affair, saying that he never had suspected his wife of the least unfaithfulness.

However, neighbors declare that Christie was a daily visitor at the Peckham home, always arriving a few minutes after the husband had departed.

VISION

Of the Rancher's Wife Showed Her Son Killed in Alaska and It Came True.

Valentine, Neb., May 30.—According to advice just received here Mrs. Helen Wingate, wife of a well known Cherry county rancher, a few weeks ago had a vision when sitting in her room writing a letter, in which she saw her son, Abner Wingate, killed in an accident in Alaska.

Mrs. Wingate has just received news from Alaska telling her of the death of her son. He was killed, probably as she saw him killed in her vision, by the accidental discharge of a shotgun.

Abner Wingate left his Nebraska home 15 years ago, and his parents received no word from him after he went away. For years they had mourned him as dead.

One of the Important Duties of Physicians and the Well-Informed of the World is to learn as to the relative standing and reliability of the leading manufacturers of medicinal agents, as the most eminent physicians are the most careful as to the uniform quality and perfect purity of remedies prescribed by them, and it is well known to physicians and the Well-Informed generally that the California Fig Syrup Co., by reason of its correct methods and perfect equipment and the ethical character of its product has attained to the high standing in scientific and commercial circles which is accorded to successful and reliable houses only, and, therefore, that the name of the Company has become a guarantee of the excellence of its remedy.

TRUTH AND QUALITY

appeal to the Well-Informed in every walk of life and are essential to permanent success and creditable standing, therefore we wish to call the attention of all who would enjoy good health, with its blessings, to the fact that it involves the question of right living with all the term implies. With proper knowledge of what is best each hour of recreation, of enjoyment, of contemplation and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and the use of medicines dispensed with generally to great advantage, but as in many instances a simple, wholesome remedy may be invaluable if taken at the proper time, the California Fig Syrup Co. feels that it is alike important to present truthfully the subject and to supply the one perfect laxative remedy which has won the approval of physicians and the world-wide acceptance of the Well-Informed because of the excellence of the combination, known to all, and the original method of manufacture, which is known to the California Fig Syrup Co. only.

This valuable remedy has been long and favorably known under the name of—Syrup of Figs—and has attained to world-wide acceptance as the most excellent of family laxatives, and as its pure laxative principles, obtained from Senna, are well known to physicians and the Well-Informed of the world to be the best of natural laxatives, we have adopted the more elaborate name of—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as more fully descriptive of the remedy, but doubtless it will always be called for by the shorter name of Syrup of Figs—and to get its beneficial effects always note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package, whether you simply call for—Syrup of Figs—or by the full name—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—as—Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna—is the one laxative remedy manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. and the same heretofore known by the name—Syrup of Figs—which has given satisfaction to millions. The genuine is for sale by all leading druggists throughout the United States in original packages of one size only, the regular price of which is fifty cents per bottle.

Every bottle is sold under the general guarantee of the Company, filed with the Secretary of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., that the remedy is not adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of the Food and Drugs Act, June 30th, 1906.

It will be a treat for you to call and see the beautiful display on the parlor floor of Hotel Warden, room 102. Please keep in mind that the sale will last only a few days and they will be pleased to have you call at your earliest opportunity. It

OBITUARY

MRS. CHAS. WILKINS.

Mrs. Charles Wilkins, aged 76 years, died Friday night at her home on the Martinsburg road after an illness of a week, following a stroke of paralysis sustained last Monday. The funeral will be held Monday at Newton chapel, of which the deceased was a member. The services will be conducted at 10 o'clock and interment will be had in the Barnes cemetery.

Mrs. Wilkins was one of the pioneer residents of this locality and was widely known and deeply respected. She leaves her husband, two sons, Nelson and Harrison Wilkins, and one daughter, Mrs. Milton Wilkins of Wilkins Corners; also one brother, John C. Smith of Perry county, and one sister, Mrs. David Layman, residing near Martinsburg.

LEROY DEWECE.

Mr. Leroy Dewece, a well known resident of Mary Ann township, died at 8 o'clock Friday night after an illness of three weeks with paralysis. He is survived by his widow and two daughters by his first wife. Six grandchildren, and an aged mother, living at Columbus, O., also survive.

The funeral services will be held at his late home on Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. Mr. Walker of Reynoldsburg, and the interment will be made in Cedar Hill cemetery.

AMOS WALTERS.

The funeral of Amos Walters, aged 79, who died at his home five miles west of the city, takes place Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the Licking church, interment being made in the Licking cemetery.

MAX HOUTSCHULTE.

The funeral service over the remains of Max C. M. Houtschulte who died at his home on Leroy street, was held at St. Francis de Sales church, Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Interment took place at Mt. Calvary cemetery.

QUICK WORK.

Warsaw, Ind., May 30.—Fifteen minutes after becoming a resident of this city, J. Fred Beyer, president of the large parking firm of Beyer Bros. company, became a candidate for mayor and will probably head the Republican ticket. His country home was taken in when the council extended the corporate boundary.

BEAUTIFUL SERVICES HELD IN GRANVILLE

Commemoration of the Death of Mrs. Martha Roberts Adkins, Who Died in China.

Granville, O., May 30.—The ending of a beautiful life at the other side of the globe in faraway China, was fittingly commemorated Friday afternoon at the meeting of the Woman's Baptist Missionary society of Granville. As a student in Saperdun college and the conservatory, as organist for the Granville Baptist church, then as a teacher of music in Broadus Institute, W. Va., and in Wayland Academy, Wisconsin, and finally as the bride of one of Denmark's alumni, Dr. Russell Adkins, with whom she set forth less than a year ago upon devoted mission service, she has been ever characterized by a gracious presence and a beautiful influence. The thoughtfulness of Mrs. C. J. Rose, president of the Missionary society, provided the opportunity which all felt to be fitting, for commemorating this life of rare sweetness.

One of the songs sung most sweetly by Mrs. Adkins at the meetings of this society, the hymn, "In the Secret of His Presence," was sung by Mrs. Mabel Ashton, and the following tribute of tender personal affection was read by Miss Harriet M. Barker, dean of Saperdun college:

"The sad news of the death of Mrs. Martha Roberts Adkins, which by cablegram from Swatow, China, reached Granville over two weeks ago, brought with it a strange sense of unreality to the large circle of friends by whom Martha was known and loved. The report of her illness, received here a month after an operation for appendicitis had been performed, gave the hope that the critical time was in a measure past and that further word would bring news of convalescence. And yet from the first Mrs. Adkins' immediate family had the gravest fears as to her recovery. To them the interval of waiting before the end came was fraught with the greatest anxiety."

Perhaps there is no sort of preparation that can make death a welcome messenger when his summons means a broken circle, hushed hopes, desolation of heart for those who remain; and yet, coming as it does sometimes, at the end of three-score years and ten worthily lived, it brings with it a sense of completion, fruition, maturity, like the dropping of the full, ripe fruit, which falls but to be garnered. But when the dread messenger comes in the full dawn of one's powers—with the work but just begun, how the mystery of death bears down upon us!

Martha Roberts Adkins had but just begun what her friends seemed the work for which she was fittingly gifted. Graduating from Saperdun Conservatory, she had taught with rare success some eight years in the musical departments of Broadus Institute and Wayland Academy, when "the gift of a good man's love" and the unselfish longings of her heart to serve earth's neediest ones led her with her husband, Dr. Russell E. Adkins, to their future field in South China. A few months of earnest study of the Chinese language, with indications of marked ability in its acquirement, a brief interval of blessed and tender companionship with the "man at her side," an entering upon the new life in the Orient with that sweet adaptability and winning manner so characteristic of this beautiful girl, and then the summons came.

What is the lesson for those of us who "tarry yet a little longer"? Human though we are, clinging to the tender earthly presence, longing for the "sound of the voice that is still," the passing of this dear friend only reassures us that for such as she there is no death. Her strong, pure life, her winning personality will live on in the hearts she leaves behind. The songs she sang in all their measured sweetness will abide a gracious memory. Ingelwoll has truly said, "They are poor who have lost nothing and they most poor of all who, losing, wish they might forget." Martha's triumphant faith and loyal devotion to life's best endeavor will be cherished possessions to all who knew and loved her.

Seeing now "through a glass darkly," we may not follow this pilgrim as she journeys into the "great beyond," but "somewhere in God's great universe she is today."

"What matters it to Him who holds within The hollow of His hand all worlds, all space, That she is done with earthly pain and sin? Somewhere within His ken she has a place.

Freed from earth's limitations, in glad reunion with father and sisters, Martha has but entered upon a larger existence, a better and truer service for her Lord. Shall we grieve for her whom this higher development, unimpeded by temporal conditions has begun? As we miss the music of her voice, may we not be glad that with a soul attuned to the eternal melody she sang the "new and holy song?"

It is when our dearest ones have left us, when the "circle" is broken, that we enter upon a tender and solemn education in life's mysteries and learn the great lesson that love is eternal and physical distance cannot separate us from those we hold most dear.

It was Christ himself who to His sorrowing disciples clinging to their Lord, communicated this great truth when He said, "It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come to you." Into this spiritual realm the far-away husband and Martha's family are not called. May this new experience, overwhelming on its earthly side, lead them beyond the temporal and prove but the "blessing of the Lord, which maketh rich and addeth no sorrow!"

Dr. C. J. Baldwin, who has been pastor during the many sore bereavements which have come to both the Roberts and the Adkins families, spoke tender and hopeful words as to the meaning and higher uses of the mystery of sorrow and then led the hearts of all up to the throne of the Heavenly Father for the comfort which human sympathy alone cannot give. At this time, when America commemorates her dead veteran soldiers, it is fitting that this brief but beautiful life which was denied the service for which it had been so nobly offered, should have its tribute of tears and tender love and the repetition of the songs she herself used to sing.

will not be settled until people realize just what it means to flood the system with the impurities which swarm in the contaminated water which many of our people are still using as a table water.

Remember, that CLEAR WATER is not necessarily PURE WATER, and if pollution could be seen you would turn from it in disgust.

A REPUBLICAN TARIFF.

The trusts and manufacturers now want a tariff not only for protection, but for trade. This is a new idea. A tariff that would enable them to sell cheaper abroad than at home without being detected, and still keep the monopoly of the home market for them, would indeed be a daisy. Democrats want a tariff as a means of collecting revenues; but the Trusts and Manufacturers never think of that. They think only of monopolies and private gains.

COUNTING HIM OUT.

The Republican National committee has selected Senator Burrows for temporary chairman, and John Malloy of Columbus, a Forakerman, for temporary secretary of the National convention. This means that the temporary organization will be hostile to Taft, and that most of the 200 contesting delegates opposed to Taft will probably be admitted to the Republican convention.

MEMORIAL DAY

soldiers of the republic have now reached the average age of 63. At that rate, the deaths will come faster and faster still, and within ten years the noble army will be all but a memory.
And the soldiers of the civil war not been mere lads in their teens, the Grand Army would long ago have perished from the earth—but the Union was saved, and the boys—boys in their teens and young had not even reached their teens.

Starting us, this statement seems, it is indisputably borne out by the official record.

There were 278,000 enlistments as follows:

At the age of 10 and under	35
At the age of 12 and under	100
At the age of 14 and under	1,532
At the age of 16 and under	84,291
At the age of 18 and under	1,151,438
At the age of 21 and under	2,102,308

Twenty-two years of age and over 618,311.
Adding the number under 21 and over 22—that is, 2,102,308 and 618,311—the total enrollment was 2,720,619.

But there are some very old men in the Grand Army of the Republic, and that is all the more reason why the death losses will be exceedingly high in the years near at hand. There will come a time when the last call will be responded to each month by no less than 500 of the brave forces of '61, for already that figure has been reached by one half and over and is growing with alarming rapidity. Here are startling official figures: War expenditures reached $4,000,000,000. During the war 61,000 men were killed in battle.

The records also show that 43,042 died of wounds.

Disease claimed 224,588. And 24,712 perished from other causes. There were 290,000 wounded in battle.

Between all these dread disasters, it is a wonder that even a remnant of the Grand Army of the Republic survives; and it should ever be the pride and pleasure of this American Republic to remember the debt owed to the boys of '61.

Happily, all soldiers who have survived "forty years after the close of the war" (to quote the language of the law), are now entitled to a "service pension."

BIG REUNION

Was That of Soldiers Held Here in 1878 When 30,000 Strangers Crowded the City.

On this eventful Memorial day, so sacred to the soldier, when the remnant of that once numerous band that went out from Licking county to battle for their country, is gathered here to do honor to their dead comrades, it is fitting to recall the greatest day that soldiers ever had in Newark—that memorable July 22, 1878, when the state of Ohio and then some, flocked to Newark to commemorate the anniversary of the death of General James B. McPherson. It was one of the first state reunions of the soldiers of the Civil war, and was a big thing, fully 30,000 strangers being in the city. President Hayes and General Sherman were in attendance. The people began arriving in the city as early as the evening before and by 8 o'clock in the morning of the day of "the reunion the streets of the city were nearly impassable and still they kept arriving. Every train was blocked with its load of humanity. A number of handsome triumphal arches had been erected in different parts of the city, and ten thousand flags fluttered and moved in the breeze from the windows of stores and residences.

Shortly before 10 o'clock the train bearing President Hayes, attended by his son Webb, and Attorney General Devens, and Governor Bishop and his staff arrived in the city and were received with a salute of 21 guns and an immense concourse of people.

The first to arrive in the morning was General Sherman and Colonel Connell of the Seventeenth, from Lancaster. The procession was one of the largest and most imposing ever held in the state, and the veterans marched at a brisk step and occupied by 50 minutes in passing a given point. The procession of old veterans completely filled West Main street and reached from the square to the fair grounds. The most conspicuous figure in the procession was "Old Abe," the war eagle, that was carried all through the war by the members of the Eighth Wisconsin regiment. The eagle looked as grave and interested as any of the spectators. One of the features of the big day was the dinner that was served at the Old Fort for the people of Newark to the old veterans. The fire works on the public square in the early part of the evening were perfectly grand and were witnessed by thousands of people.

The celebration wound up in the evening with a banquet at the Lancaster House.

During the celebration speeches were made by President Hayes, General W. T. Sherman, General Warren Kellie, General Willard Warner, General Devens, ex Governor Fletcher of Missouri, General L. A. Garfield, General Leggett, Governor Bishop and other notables.

NEXT TRIP TO NEW MEXICO COMES JUNE 16

Texas and New Mexico Compared—Home-seekers' Opportunity—Many Ohio People Interested.

All of the papers in New Mexico and in other parts of the great southwest now rapidly filling up with home-seekers from Ohio and the East, are pointing the following verses about Texas. There is great rivalry between Texas and New Mexico and the opportunities for the home-seekers and investors are so much better in New Mexico than the East, for the latter country are joyfully printing the following lines:

The devil in hell, we're told, was chained.
And a thousand years he there remained:
He never complained, nor did he groan,
But determined to start a hell of his own.

Where he could torment the souls of men.
Without being chained in a prison pen.
So he asked the Lord if he had on hand
Anything left when he made the land.

The Lord said: "Yes, I had plenty on hand,
But I left it down on the Rio Grande;
The fier is, old boy, the stuff is so poor,
I don't think you could use it in hell any more."

But the devil went down to look at the truck,
And said if it came as a gift he was stuck:
For after examining it carefully and well,
He concluded the place was too dry for a hell.

So in order to get it off of his hands,
The Lord promised the devil to water the lands;
For he had some water, or rather some dregs,
A regular cathartic, and smelled like bad eggs.

Hence the deal was closed and deed was given,
And the Lord went back to his home in heaven.
And the devil then said: "I have all that is needed
To make a good hell," and hence he succeeded.

He began to put thorns on all of the trees,
And mixed up the sand with millions of fleas;
And scattered tarantulas along all the roads;
Put thorns on the cactus and horns on the toads.

He lengthened the horns of the Texas steers,
And put additions on the rabbit's ears;
He put a little devil in the broncho steed
And poisoned the feet of the centipede.

The rattlesnake bites you, the scorpion stings,
The mosquito delights you with buzzing wings;
The sandburs prevail and so do the ants,
And those who sit down need half-soles on their pants.

The devil then said that throughout the land
He'd manage to keep up the devil's own brand,
And all would be mavericks unless they bore
Marks of scratches and bites and thorns by the score.

The heat in the summer is a hundred and ten,
Too hot for the devil and too hot for men.
The wild boar roams through the black chaparral,
It's a hell of a place he has for a hell.

The red pepper grows on the banks of the brook;
The Mexicans use it in all that they cook.
Just dine with a "greaser" and then you will shout:
"I've hell on the inside as well as the out."

Friends of New Mexico, and they are increasing in number every day, proudly claim that no such rhyme can ever be truthfully invented about that country. In portions of the territory where irrigation has been introduced the land has been made to blossom as the rose and in other sections, like that around Las Vegas, no irrigation is necessary. The crops there are abundant and rich and land prices are advancing with the influx of visitors from the east. Many people from Central Ohio who have visited Las Vegas have purchased large tracts of land for speculation or for investment and they are well satisfied with their purchases. Many have been there to look it over and others are going.

John Tucker of this city is arranging to conduct another party to Las Vegas on Tuesday, June 16. The round trip fare from Newark will be $41.25, which sum will be refunded to all who invest in New Mexico land. Through train from Chicago with every convenience. Those who may be interested in joining the party, which is an inspection tour party, are invited to call upon or write to John Tucker, 71 1-2 East Main street, Newark, O. Remember the next excursion to New Mexico is on Tuesday, June 16.

at the end of his physical endurance is yet to be seen. It is understood that Senator Stone, who is opposed to the bill, will give active support to the filibuster and Senator Gore manifested some sympathy at times by noting the absence of a quorum. As a body, however, the Democrats are positively opposed to obstruction, as are the Republicans.

The 21st call to ascertain whether there was a quorum present was made by Mr. Gore at 6:45 p. m. He consulted with Mr. Stone just previous to raising the point of no quorum, which suggested that those senators were actually in sympathy with the Wisconsin senator. Messrs. Gore and Stone left the chamber during the roll call and did not respond to their names.

On the 23d roll call at 7:15 p. m., upon motion of Mr. Stone, the absence of a quorum was developed and the sergeant-at-arms was directed to bring in the absentees. After several minutes the requisite number of senators answered, but nevertheless, the order to the sergeant-at-arms was allowed to stand.

When Mr. La Follette was recognized to resume his speech, he said: "I have been informed that there is to be a rule sprung on me here that a senator can speak no more than twice on the same subject in a legislative day. I would like to know whether if I should yield the floor, I could get it again."

Several senators concurred in the statement that Mr. La Follette probably had placed the right construction on the rules and it was evident that if he gave up the floor he would have a hard time securing it again.

Mr. La Follette read at great length from a work of fiction on the subject of the physical valuation of railroads, occasionally calling for a quorum. He declared that he would be able to make himself heard "not only tonight, but tomorrow as well."

The chamber was crowded as the evening session wore on. The galleries, with the exception of the sections reserved for senators' families and for the diplomatic corps, also were crowded.

At 8:30 o'clock, Senator Stone of Missouri called for a quorum and left the capital for his hotel soon after making his point, saying it was necessary to secure some sleep before beginning his promised speech.

At 9:20 o'clock, Senator Gore called for a quorum, remarking that it was evident there was a lack of the required number of senators.

"Anybody can see that," said the senator from Wisconsin, turning to the blind senator.

The vigor and resources of Mr. La Follette were probably never more severely tested than they were last night. At 11:30 o'clock he was in better voice and was speaking with more vehemence than had characterized his remarks at 3 o'clock. He was also making more attempts at presenting an argument than he had done during the day. Evidently it was not his purpose to devote his remarks to the merits of the currency bill exclusively. He touched upon what he characterized as a threat to defeat the public building bill in case the currency bill did not become a law and discussed the tariff and other public questions.

After Mr. La Follette has spoken for more than 10 hours he received a note from some watcher he had placed on guard.

"Why," he said, reading it, "I didn't know I was only speaking to 26 senators. I will have to make this speech all over."

Sensor Stone returned just before midnight and it was rumored that Senator Jeff Davis had telegraphed Senator La Follette that he was coming and that to hold out until he reached Washington early Saturday.

It was also said that several Democrats had received dispatches from Mr. Bryen urging them to join in the filibuster, but this was not generally credited.

Republican leaders say they will have a quorum from their own membership today and that they will not be defeated by a one or two-man filibuster if they have to keep congress in session indefinitely.

Sensor Stone arranged to relieve Mr. La Follette. The latter had just raised a point of no quorum and Mr. Aldrich, moved that the sergeant-at-arms be instructed to compel the attendance of absentees from the chamber who are in the city. The purpose of Mr. Aldrich's motion was to compel Mr. La Follette to remain in the chamber. Mr. Stone, who was anxious to take the Wisconsin senator's place, moved to suspend the execution of the order, but the motion was defeated by the Republicans. Mr. La Follette proceeded with his speech.

At 2 o'clock in the morning Mr. La Follette let it be known that he intended to speak until 8 or 9 o'clock.

On October 9, 1893, Senator Allen of Nebraska, in the silver debate, spoke for more than 11 hours continuously. At 2 o'clock Mr. La Follette had almost equalled this record, and the indications are that he will exceed it several hours.

In the afternoon Mr. La Follette's clerk, who has been on the floor counting the senators from time to time and supplying Mr. La Follette with data, was ruled off the floor upon the motion of a senator, his presence there being against the rules.

Who's Afraid of The Girls?

We used to be when we went to the little old red school house, but we outgrew that a long time ago. Now we like to have them come into our store and buy a pair of our new "summer girl" shoes. Perhaps you have already noticed some of these beautiful patent leather and tan pumps and oxfords on our streets. The young woman who goes away on her vacation without a pair of these beauties will regret it. They come in a number of graceful shapes, have handsome buckles and bows, and are quite the prettiest as well as most serviceable shoes we have ever had the pleasure of handling.

NEWARK

HAS HER BATTING EYE IN MORNING GAME WITH TIGERS.

BINGLES COME THICK AND FAST AT WHIRLE PARK.

Small Crowd Out to See Game but a Number of Fans Take in Game at Mansfield.

At the first inning no score was made, but in the second Flood received a base on balls, was sacrificed by Channell. An error by Gygli and Murray allowed him to score.

In the third inning a double by J. Smith and a triple by "Pop" Smith followed by a single by Gygli and a triple by Murray, scored Snyder, Abbott, "Pop" Smith, Gygli and "Jim" Smith.

In Mansfield's half of the third, singles by Biery, Mathay and Channell brought in one run.

Neither side scored in the fourth. In the fifth Locke grounded out, Gygli singled and went to second when Murray was hit. Both Gygli and Murray stole, and Wratton fled out, but Winter's two sacker scored two.

Smith fled out.

Newark's half of the sixth added four runs. Snyder fled out, Abbott singled, "Pop" Smith hit, Locke grounded out. Gygli hit and on an error of Kettler's Smith scored Gygli taking third, Murray doubled, and Gygli scored. Breyer then threw to Kettler to catch Wratton, who played them back and fourth until Murray scored and Wratton was touched out.

Mansfield scored one in the fifth by making two two-baggers while Newark was blanked.

Score by innings:

Newark 0 0 5 0 2 4 10 15 2
Mansfield 0 1 1 0 0 1 2 9 2

The game was called at 11:45 to enable the teams to catch the Mansfield train.

RABBIT SPECIAL.

The "Rabbit Special," leaving here on the B. & O. for Mansfield at 12:30 p. m. Saturday, will carry a crowd of Newark fans along with the ball team. Several persons went up to Mansfield from here on the regular train to attend the game.

PHYSICIAN

Who Doesn't Believe in Using Drugs, Testifies in Case at Allegan, Michigan.

Allegan, Mich., May 29.—A physician who does not believe in the use of medicines was a witness yesterday in behalf of Mrs. David Neely of Plainwell, a Christian Scientist, on trial for manslaughter in permitting her child to die without medical attendance.

The physician was Dr. Frank Edwards, of Evanson, Ill. He was educated in four different medical colleges and had visited the hospitals of Berlin and several other foreign cities.

He had been personally connected as a physician and surgeon with two noted hospitals. He believes nature can cure without drugs, and does not approve of their administration.

The charge demonstrates that a round of applause isn't always on the square.

Is the Jury, But Court Sent Jurors Back to Room—Whitmore Collapsed.

(Bulletin.)
Harrison, N. J., May 29.—The jury in the trial of Theodore Whitmore, who is on trial for killing his wife, Lena, reported to the court this morning that it had failed to reach an agreement, and was "hopelessly divided." The foreman asked that the judge again read his charge. "I can not do so," declared Judge Swazee. "The jury will retire at once and will come to an agreement, as soon as possible." Whitmore is in a state of almost collapse.

AUDITORIUM THEATRE

HIGH SPEED ON SHARP CURVE

Believed to be Cause of B. & O. Wreck—Last of Injured at Garrett, Pa.

Connellsville, Pa., May 29.—While the B. & O. officials have not definitely stated the direct cause of yesterday's wreck at Garrett, it is believed that it was due to high speed in connection with the sharp curve. It was long ago predicted that some day one of the fast trains rounding a sharp curve would snap off the tail-end car and cause a most disastrous wreck. This prediction, it is believed, was almost fulfilled.

The car was crowded and 20 passengers were injured, three of them, perhaps, fatally.

The injured are:

S. M. Johnston, Butte, Mont., neck and shoulders injured.

L. R. Sanford, Lagrange, Ill., bruises and contusions from head to foot.

Frank Sweeney, Port Jarvis, N. Y., severe bruises.

James Kane, Port Jarvis, N. Y., slight cuts.

J. C. McCahn, mail inspector, slight cut on hand.

Marion Madore, Aspinwall, Pa., hands and face bruised.

Chas. Hogendorp, Baltimore, head and elbow bruised and slight cuts.

J. L. Kelly, Bristol, Va., knee bruised.

J. D. Biddle, Navy Department, head cut and bruised.

Mrs. W. H. Ray, St. Joseph, Mich., head cut and shoulder bruised.

Mrs. J. W. Cline, Callery, Pa., cut on hip.

Mrs. F. L. Brendel, Hagerstown, Md., bruised arms, hips and side.

Lloyd Brendel, Hagerstown, sides and hips bruised.

Mrs. A. V. Owens, Baltimore, bruises about the shoulders and arms.

That nobody was killed is considered almost a miracle.

EMBROIDERED and PAINTED CHIFFON EVENING GOWNS for the SPRING and SUMMER SEASONS

THE task of selecting the spring and summer wardrobe is far more arduous than planning for the autumn and winter and as a rule involves much more outlay of money as well. Charming little summer frocks are simple only in name, for fashionable simplicity is most costly, and in these days when the feminine world has been so thoroughly instructed in the knowledge of real lace and hand embroidery the cheap imitations can never be willingly chosen, and incidentally real lace and hand embroidery are expensive luxuries. Then, the spring and summer outfit must include a greater number of gowns by far, for in late autumn the general temperature is quite like the average winter climate, and the addition of a heavier outside wrap or fur garment makes possible the lighter weight gown. Spring clothes are not possible for all summer, with the one exception perhaps of the evening gowns, and even these generally display a marked contrast one to the other.

THE SPRING DINNER GOWN.

For the spring season there is not required such an elaborate style of evening gown as for the winter, or midsummer if midsummer be spent at some fashionable watering place, like Newport for instance. During the spring before people close their town houses and go to the country the most formal entertainments given are dinners, dances not being considered at this moment. Consequently the dinner gown is more important than the ball gown. It is a moot question whether it is more economical to wear the ball gown that has done duty all winter or have some fresh smart dinner gown of less cost. If the former has had hard enough wear to look shabby and not fresh it is quite impossible, no matter how smart and effective in design it may be. If it is absolutely fresh, then economy would indicate that it were best put carefully away until again the season of balls begins, for with a really up to date, expensive ball gown the chances are that it will be more than ever useful the second season—unless it has been made up in some such exaggeratedly distinctive style that it will look old fashioned or be recognized at first glance as a last season's model. Velvet dinner gowns that have been most attractive in appearance during the winter must now be put aside. No matter how costly and effective or how becoming, they are not suitable for the present moment and really suffer painfully by contrast with far less costly gowns made of the new spring materials and in the more advanced fashions.

Dinner gown is by no means the decisive word it was at one time, and under the name of dinner gowns are now exhibited many different styles that do not stand out as distinctive. The elaborate theatre gowns are now made like the dinner gowns of several years since, when if a gown were cut the least bit low in the neck and had elbow sleeves it merited the name. The elaborate tea gown is so alike in almost every detail that it takes the eye of a trained connoisseur in clothes to discern which is which, while, as has so often been said, the elaborate dinner gown and the ball gown are one and the same, although it is sometimes attempted to mark a difference between them by the length of skirt or sleeves.

The theatre gown is at the moment undergoing a great change in America, and is becoming more and more evident that the fashion of wearing a gown cut low at the neck when dining in public or when at the play is growing in favor. Conservative minded women—and there are a goodly number of the species still extant—count that the veiling of the neck with lace or tulle is smarter for the theatre, and restaurant, and the effect is much the same. At the moment there would appear to be a compromise, for both styles are to be seen. At the same time there is something quite incongruous in the spectacle presented by the woman who enters the theatre and, taking her place in the orchestra stalls, removes her hat and wrap and is then seen to be in a low cut gown. In other countries, where the majority of people are not obliged to go about in crowded cars and stages, the fashion seems more practical, for there can be no question that the low gowns are far cooler.

OPENWORK AND SPANGLES.

Extremely light in effect are the latest fashions exhibited for summer evening gowns. Transparent fabrics are the most popular and light colors reign supreme. There are to be noticed spangles and paillettes as a popular trimming, and used in such a way as to seem quite original. An openwork design traced on a chiffon or net in spangles or paillettes gives a most charming effect. Whether it is worked in silver, gold or jet, the lining of the gown is always most carefully fitted, and then over it is the material itself, arranged to fall in graceful folds and to indicate rather than to define any beauty of line with which the wearer is blessed or to conceal any defect of figure. These soft, clinging folds are a serious problem to the amateur dressmaker, and in truth to many a professional, but with a perfectly fitted and hung lining the task is made more simple, for then studying the lines of the individual figure and disposing the material in accordance therewith, while all the time carefully following out a design that has been chosen with reference to the wearer, will not be impossible of achievement.

Color effects are among the details of these fashions, the lining and the material itself rarely being of the same color or shade, the cloth of silver or gold shining through pale pink, blue, mauve or white giving a most fascinating appearance, while the old French combination of pink and blue has once again an opportunity to display its charm. A pale silvery gray made over a blush rose pink and with a graceful pattern worked in silver spangles for trimming makes one of the most charming gowns imaginable, although on the simplest of lines.

One of the most useful gowns in the modern outfit is the chiffon or silk voile gown suitable for theatre, restaurant or at home. The favorite model this season owes its popularity most to its graceful lines and the color chosen, for the only trimming is the knot of velvet or satin on the waist and the lace revers or yoke. Worn with a taffeta wrap, this is quite appropriate for an afternoon reception or garden party, and as it can be made in almost any material it possesses the most practical of elements for almost every woman, but care must be taken for fear that if the lines are not carefully studied the artistic will triumph over the smart and the general effect be rather "dowdy"—that strange word to the feminine mind so comprehensive and descriptive. Black and white gowns will never quite go out of fashion and if well made are invariably smart. They are considered quite as smart for women who are not in second mourning as when intended to emphasize the fact that second mourning is being worn, and it is easily possible even to introduce some color to quite do away with the effect. Silk satin crêpe de Chine, combined with lace, is very smart, and the black lace over white is universally becoming. For theatre, restaurant or informal dinners these gowns of black and white are most appropriate and useful, and, strange to say, possess a most marked individuality year after year. A touch of scarlet, cerise, mauve or blue works wonders in securing different effects, while even without any color being introduced the gown stands out in most charmingly distinctive fashion. Flat bands of lace are a favorite style of trimming at the moment, while the Empire effect can be most becomingly suggested by the same bands differently arranged. Flounced chiffons and silks are evidently intended to be popular this season, for so many different patterns are displayed. They certainly make up most effectively in the simple dinner gowns. The colors are exquisite, and there is no trimming required on the skirt. The lace jacket in bolero or Empire style finishes the waist most becomingly, or bands of lace can be arranged to be most becoming. There are also flowered mulls and muslins that are less expensive and almost as effective that will later on be made use of for midsummer. The wide range of color makes it possible to secure becoming effects, and a woman must be sadly lacking in any taste and extremely ugly in appearance who does not find it an easy task to choose a becoming gown made on this model. The materials suitable for the fashion are all on the soft, clinging order: they drape and hang well, and when the lining also is of the soft silk the fashionable appearance of being draped or swathed in folds of material is most easily attained.

If silk is chosen in preference to chiffon, mull or muslin, then the soft finished effects are the ones. The stiffer silks are not in keeping with this model, and just now undivided attention is being paid to choosing materials and robes that will accord with each model. Such attention to detail seems perhaps to be trivial, but successful dress of today owes its success to the carrying out of every point, and the woman who is credited with being the best gowned is invariably she who has bestowed the most care upon all the apparently trifling minutiae of her costume. Everything is in harmony, and the result is so finished and perfect that the gown challenges attention and admiration at once, far more than perhaps one that is more costly by far and that is not complete or has some discordant elements. There are plenty of different models to select from this season, so that all materials can be used, and it is well worth while to select the appropriate, and to carefully consider fabric as well as color and trimming.

For the purpose of being new and effective, then, or better colored lace done in colored ribbon embroidery is a charming trimming to use in this way. It is now also, and may be done at home, ready for the dressmaker to adjust, it will only be clever with the needle and wants to save on the dressmaker's bill.

FASHION DETAILS EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW

The Chiffon Coat.

AMONG the very exquisite new coats for formal wear those of chiffon are perhaps the most attractive. The voile coats of material almost as thin and fragile as the chiffon are also beautiful and the most delicate color effects are obtained in these two materials, especially in the elaborate rate coats which are braided and embroidered. Braiding and embroidery seems in a way to have taken the place of lace in many of these garments. If the lace is used it is generally supplemented by braiding.

garment infinitely more attractive. In fact the reason for the transparent quality of the outer fabric is then obvious. A very charming effect is also obtained in some of the two toned voiles. A coat noticed the other day was of voile, in very light brown—or tan with an underweaving of blue green. The lining was of blue green chiffon, over a silk of more decided blue.

With the caisson coats it is equally fashionable to have the lining of darker, lighter or the same tone as the outer material. The light coats for evening and formal afternoon wear in pale pink, light blue, lavender and white are very beautiful with deeper toned linings. White pleated chiffon coats are lined with shell pink silk and trimmed with fainter pink braid and embroidery. A very delicate pink chiffon is also lined with deeper pink. Faint shades of line are lovely lined with deeper blue and green.

Skirt for General Wear.

NONE of the new skirt designs is simpler and more becoming to the average woman than that shown in figure No. 2, which has a panel front and two folds for trimming at the sides and

FIG. 2. TRIMMED WITH STITCHING AND BUTTONS.

A Neat Morning Suit.

FOR shopping and for wear on the train to and from the city there is no gown so satisfactory as a trim tailored skirt waist suit—one of washable material. Linen comes in such a variety of colors and shades and holds its freshness so long that it continues to be a favorite for these dresses. Pique is being made up into smart skirt waist suits, a rather fine cord being preferred to the heavier ones. The skirts of these costumes invariably show button trimmings, the buttons being a practical feature, however, instead of a purely ornamental one. They are used to fasten the front width of the skirt, either on one side only or both. By buttoning the skirt in this way it can be opened and spread out perfectly flat for ironing, thus simplifying the work of the laundress and making it quite easy to give the skirt a fresh and increased appearance.

The skirt, coming to the tailor costume shown in figure No. 2 has an inverted pleat each side of the front, with a row of buttons and bound buttonholes down the side of both pleats. At the knees this pleating is discontinued and the gored skirt is allowed to fall enough to show the contrasting material inserted between the front and side breadths. A smart fulness is thus obtained at the foot, a necessary feature of short wash gowns.

With this trim skirt goes a shirt waist of the linen, the two being joined by a neat belt of the same material. A double yoke, forming two points in front, imparts good lines to the shoulders and is a style particularly becoming to slender figures. Fullness in front is suggested rather than achieved by having three box pleats run from the yoke to the belt. The centre one reaches to the neck, where it is finished by a jaunty linen bow fastening. A high standing lion collar with a turn over of fine embroidery. A shirt waist sleeve and a matching cuff which buttons are correct with this type of costume.

The Tunic Skirt.

WHEN fashion creators of world wide repute send us exquisite models in which the overskirt is featured then we must believe that overskirts are going to be worn by a few at least. These same designers are, however, always eager to launch a new idea on a revived one, with the hope of its taking with the fashionable dressers and thus proving that they are worthy of reputation they have won as creators of style. Tall women and women who buy quantities of gowns so that they do not wear any one until wearied of it will only be clever with the needle and wants to welcome the overskirt in its new form.

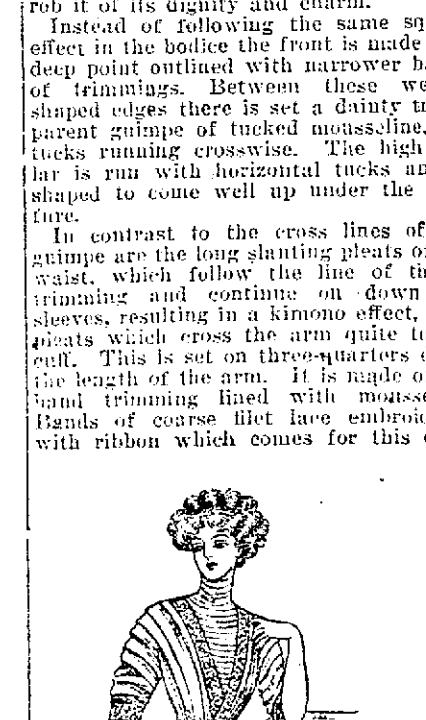

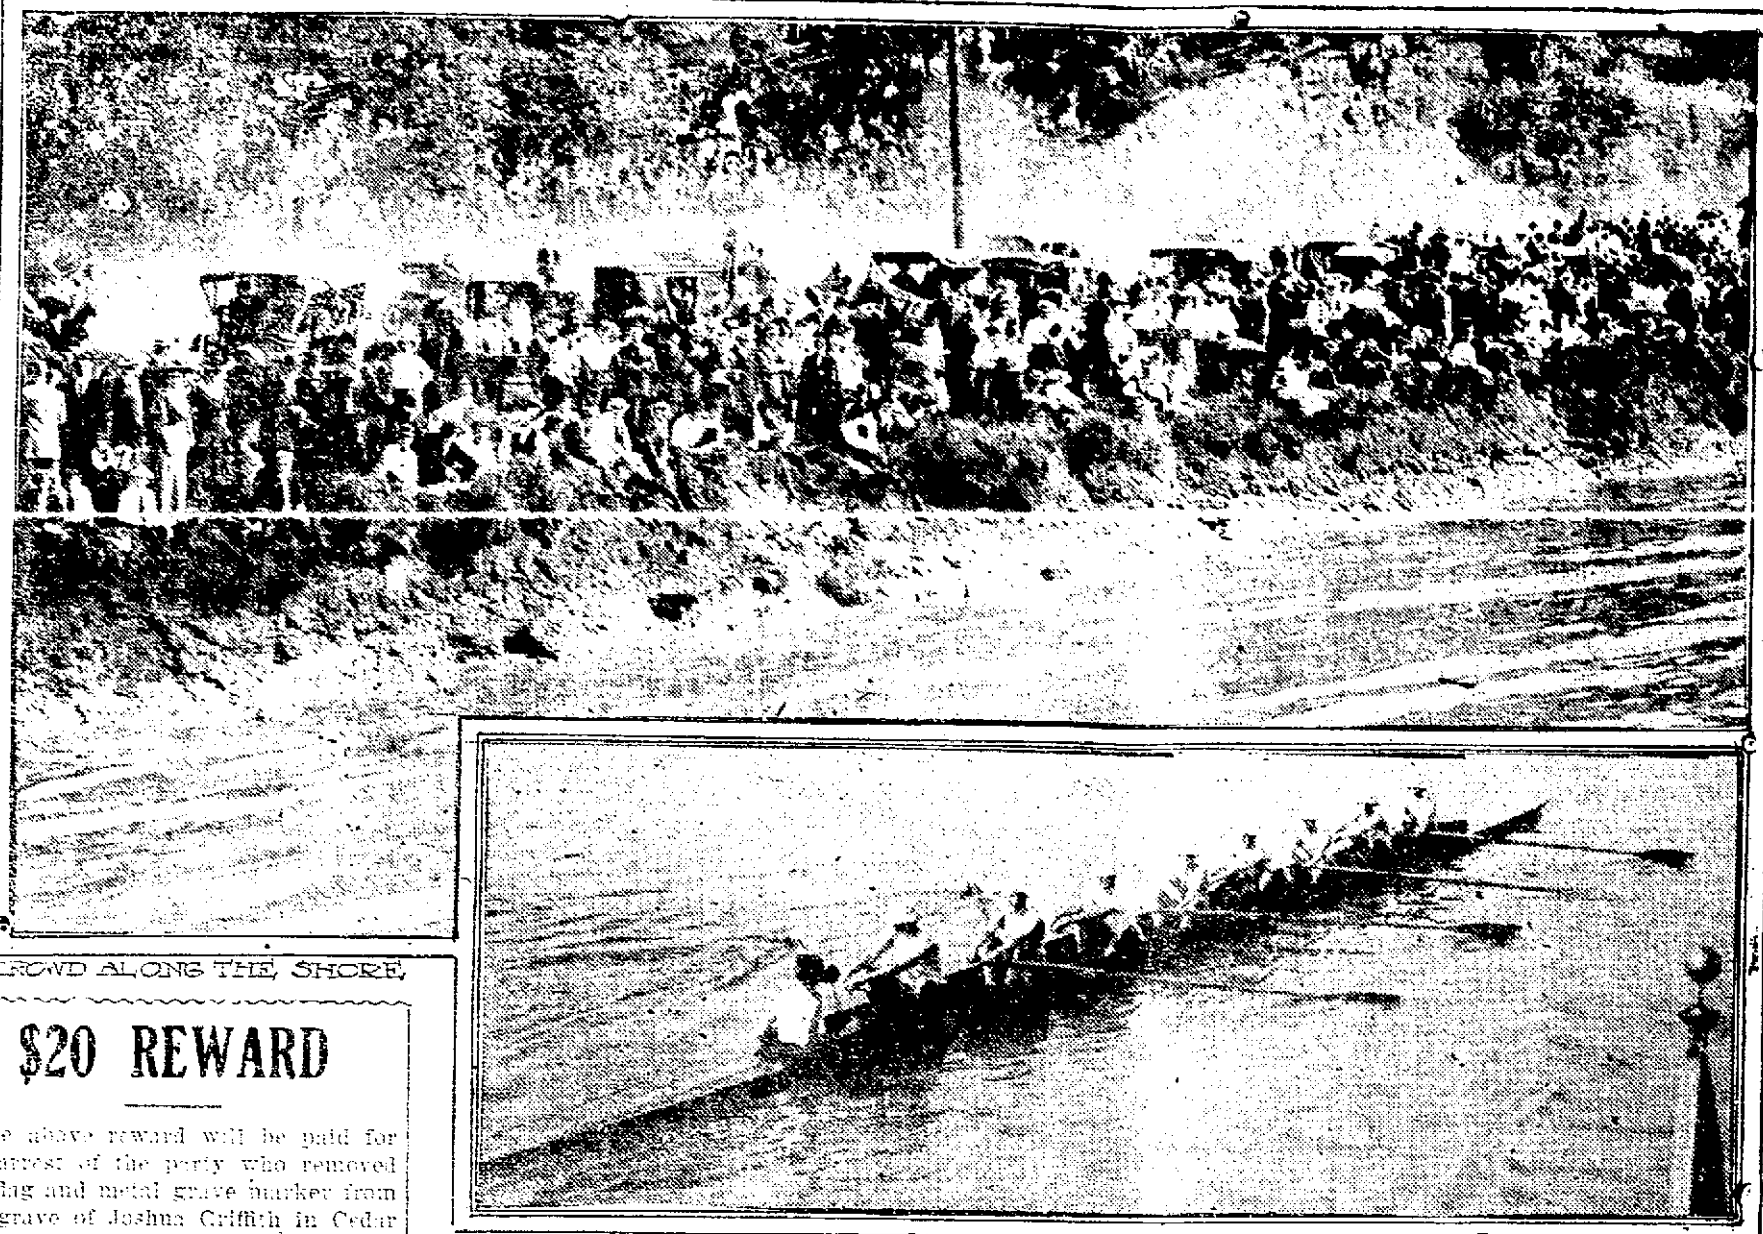

FIG. 4. A GRACEFUL OVERSKIRT DESIGN.

For the purpose of being new and effective, then, or better colored lace done in colored ribbon embroidery is a charming trimming to use in this way. It is now also, and may be done at home, ready for the dressmaker to adjust, it will only be clever with the needle and wants to save on the dressmaker's bill.

Philadelphia, May 30.—With 10,000 spectators lining the river banks and the bluffs behind, the sixth annual American Henley regatta was held over the Henley course on the Schuylkill river. The course is from Kane's Rock to Columbia Bridge, a distance of one mile and 550 yards. It was an ideal day, there was a good current which favored the oarsmen, and with the pick of the country in the boats, the occasion was from first to last a huge success. Not only was the time in many instances very good but two dead heats, one of them occurring in the big event of the day, served to enliven matters. Crews from four cities were entered and they were cheered on to victory by their friends. The very large number of automobiles lining the river bank was a feature of the occasion.

The Fight on Little Round Top

Valor of the Twentieth Maine at Gettysburg.

By FRANK H. SWEET

Colonel Joshua L. Chamberlain
In Civil War Days.

How Colonel Chamberlain Won the Medal of Honor.

Copyright, 1908, by Frank H. Sweet.

rest. At this instant the Alabamians attacked them on front and flank, opening with a murderous fire. There were five successive charges by this force.

Colonel Chamberlain with drawn sword moved up and down his lines. The bullets whizzed incessantly past him. His men were constantly groaning and falling on every side. Outnumbered more than three to one, their position was terrible, and it was apparently a hopeless one. Yet with dripping faces the men loaded and fired their muskets, displaying the cool expertness of true veterans.

Colonel Chamberlain HAZLETT'S BATTERY ON thought only of one thing—that the position he held was of great importance in the battle. Retreat might mean the destruction of an entire corps. There was no hope that supports would be sent him in season to save the position. He was resolved never to yield, though it seemed that in a few minutes not a man would be left alive.

Colonel Chamberlain thus describes what followed:

"Seeing the desperate situation, I had ordered my men to use the cartridges of the fallen, friend or foe. When they had fired their last cartridge into the faces of a rallying force I resolved to make a countercharge with the bayonet and so instructed my officers on the wheeling flank, on whom the brunt was to fall. Returning to my center, I was about to order the movement when Lieutenant Melcher, commanding the new salient center company, came up and asked if he might not rush forward and rescue some of our wounded before the oncoming enemy should trample them underfoot. I admired his tenderness and courage and answered: 'Yes, sir; I will give you a chance. I am about to order a charge.' I went forward to our colors and shouted 'Bayonet!' adding 'Forward!' But no mortal could hear this, the roar of fire and shouts of my men drowning all words.

"We made a sickle sweep, a great right wheel, with our whole line, astonishing the enemy into surrender or wild retreat. We cleared the whole valley between Little Round Top and brought back 400 prisoners. I had lost half my men on the center and a third of the entire regiment on the line. The company I had sent out on our left not being at first in the charging line, it was made by scarcely more than 200 men. We later advanced in midnight darkness, clambering the rough sides of Great Round Top, beyond which the remnants of Hood's division had retreated, and with the aid of two regiments held the position."

The heroic leader of this remarkable action, besides receiving the medal of honor for his work at Gettysburg, was made a brigadier general on the field in a later engagement by General Grant, and in 1895 General Chamberlain was brevetted a major general "for conspicuous gallantry in action."

At the ceremony of the actual surrender of the arms and colors of Lee's army at Appomattox Chamberlain was designated to command.

said, meaning the enemy, "and may keep them back for a few minutes."

The moments of suspense came suddenly to an end with the arrival of Vincent's brigade and Hazlett's battery of rifled cannon, Fifth artillery.

The young battery lieutenant spoke. "General, what is the matter?"

"The device is to pay!" was the reply. "I hope you can hold out until the infantry gets into position."

"I guess I can," answered Lieutenant Hazlett. As a matter of fact, he stayed there until he was killed.

The veteran Chamberlain, now in his eightieth year, thus describes the action from this point:

"Warren started our brigade (Vincent's) before he sent Hazlett's battery to Little Round Top. My column passed Hazlett getting his guns up by hand and handspike to the summit of Little Round Top. The Twentieth Maine was placed on the extreme left of the Union army. The attack, beginning on the right of our brigade, rolled rapidly upon my front. The assault was first from the Fourth and Fifth Texas, joined by the Fourth Alabama and next by the Forty-seventh and finally by the Fifteenth Alabama.

"My regiment had already been cut down by the casualties of the service, so that only 363 muskets were in line. We first fought without seeing the extent of the opposing force, which was constantly increasing. Then the two flanking regiments (Fifteenth and Forty-seventh Alabama), preparing a 'turning attack,' were met by a change of front. I sent also a strong company out on that flank to strike this attack in flank."

No sooner had Colonel Chamberlain's little force reached the portion of the hillside assigned to it than it was engaged by the Fourth Alabama. Soon it saw a dense mass of Confederates coming toward its left, for two strong regiments of the enemy, containing a thousand men, had been ordered to turn the Union flank at exactly that position. Discerning in a flash the grave peril of his command, the Maine colonel sent out a company to engage this force and ordered five companies to swing back until they formed a line at a right angle to the Cut clover hay when about half the blossoms are brown; cut timothy just as the bloom is falling. Curing clover: Cut it as soon as the dew is off in the morning. At noon shake out the bunches, rake into windrows before evening dews get on it, and let it lie until next day. Next day shake out the hay as soon as the dew is off. You ought to be ready to haul, on a hot day, by 11 o'clock, or certainly after dinner. It spoils clover hay to get too dry. It should never be put in the barn when wet with rain or dew, but a little say won't hurt it. Curing timothy: If the crop is not too heavy and rank, cut as soon as the dew is off, let it cure a few hours, rake into windrows and haul to the barn the same day. If crop is rank, cut it in the afternoon; it will wilt some during the night and dew will not hurt it. Next day's sun will dry it in a few hours when it can be raked into windrows; haul it to the barn in the early afternoon.—From June Farm Journal.

HAYING

To the mast,
When the shells shrieked and broke
On the Hartford's hull of oak.

The Cutest Yankee Soldier

By MITCHEL FAY.

[Copyright, 1908, by C. N. Lurie.]

HE GOT PAST THE GUARD.

he'd go on spying. He wouldn't go back to the commander who sent him until he'd finished his job and got all the information he wanted.

Our trouble was that we were in the field, where we hadn't any jail to put him in. The first time we caught him red handed, with memoranda of our forces on him, the guard was dead tired after a twenty-four hour march and went to sleep. To get away that time was easy. We caught him and shut him up in a box car on the railroad track. He sawed a hole in the bottom of the car, let himself down and got past the guard in the darkness.

Well, we caught him again, though this time he tried hard enough to make his lines, and I wanted to string him right up. The colonel came pretty near giving me an order to do so, but concluded that he'd better get the general's order, and this necessitated our keeping him overnight. This time we decided to put him in a farmhouse. We put a guard in the room with him and a double guard on the outside of the house.

The Yank, besides being slick, was the best looking chap you ever saw in your life, and he had such a pleasant smile that I hated the idea of putting an end to it. There was a half grown girl in the house, an awkward, freckled, red headed thing that none of us noticed or considered any element of danger. How the spy found a way of getting her interested in him or whether she did it all without the asking we never found out. She ran into the room where he was and excitedly told the sentry that the Yanks were coming full tilt. The guard ran out, and when he found it was only a scare and went back the prisoner wasn't there. He got away through a secret tunnel the farmer had dug.

He was a beautiful runner—we had had experience in that—and an artful dodger besides, but he had little start, and we felt no fear of not catching him. Just as we were starting in different directions a man told us of some blood-hounds near by, so we got 'em, and they picked up the scent. We didn't hurry much as soon as we found we could get the dogs, or, rather, the man I sent for 'em was a long while getting 'em, and I reckon the Yank had got about forty minutes' start; but, Lord, that wasn't anything since he was more than twenty miles from his lines, and we felt dead sure of getting him.

The dogs kept the scent for about a mile, when they lost it at a creek. The Yank had walked in the water some distance, and then, instead of getting back on to dry land on the opposite side, he crossed farther up. This threw the dogs off the scent for quite awhile.

The first we heard of our man he'd taken a horse out of a widow's barn. We followed him through a clump of houses where there was a store and learned that he'd gone into the store, told the storekeeper that he was a Confederate courier in a hurry with important dispatches, helped himself to what he could find to eat and asked the storekeeper if he had any red pepper, as he was mighty fond of it on meat. The storekeeper gave him a box, and the Yank jumped on his horse and galloped away.

Funny, wasn't it—a man flying from the rope so particular about the seasoning of his food? By this time we'd tracked him some ten miles, and he was going straight in the direction of the Federal lines, but his horse didn't seem to be much of a beast for endurance, for we kept hearing of the man nearer and nearer. When about two miles ahead of us he left the road and made for a big field, letting down a rail fence to get into it. He soon struck the road again, and it was evident that he'd made a cutoff. Then we followed him up a creek that was pretty near dry and at last came to his horse, lying stone dead in a cotton field.

"Hokey!" we all shouted. "We've got him! Another mile or two 'll do the business."

But he'd been riding all the while and must have been as fresh as a daisy for running. Anyway, he gave us a lively chase.

First we came upon his hat, that had doubtless been knocked off by a branch, and he hadn't lost time in picking it up. Some of our men had forced him to exchange a pair of worn-out shoes for his boots, and pretty soon we found blood in his tracks. We calculated we were not half a mile behind him, and it was still five miles to the nearest Federal picket. The blood tracks grew more and more marked, and it was plain that he couldn't run very fast with bleeding feet.

All of a sudden the foremost dog, skipping along with his nose to the ground, stopped and sneezed. The next and the next did the same till every dog was sneezing so hard we were afraid they'd sneeze their heads off. The Yank had poured red pepper in his shoes, in which there were plenty of holes, through which it could run out into his tracks. The dogs sneezed and sneezed and then turned tail on the trail. No whipping would drive them on. Some of us followed the Yank, but we didn't get him. The last we saw of him he was scotching into the Federal lines.

What did we do with the girl who helped him get away? Nothing. And I've been glad ever since we didn't. The Yank came back after the war and married her. They're living in the house from which she helped him to escape. They've got a dozen or more grandchildren.

In Memory of the Brave.

At Gettysburg 300 Union regiments and batteries were engaged, and today these organizations are represented by almost as many monuments, which cost from $200 to $40,000 each.

Those Broken Ranks

A Memorial Day Poem by Marion Couthouy Smith.

Sound in our dreaming ears,
And, hark, the battle thunders swell
Across the gulf of years!

How strange, how swift, the after day's Spring after spring goes by;
Voices of sorrow and of praise
In lessening murmurs die;
The ranks are thinned, their work long done,
The stately heads grown white,
And brave old comrades one by one
Pass out beyond our sight.

AND, HARK, THE BATTLE THUNDERS SWELL!
New hopes, new triumphs, projects wide,

Have filled the nation's heart.
Strong men, once children at our side,
Now fill their destined part.
But still they stand—those broken ranks—

To share with spirits dear
The incense of a people's thanks
Uprising year by year.

Alas, how soon those passing hosts
Will vanish from our view.
Their very memories be as ghosts
Of men our fathers knew!

Yet from the past, with glory fraught,
Their praises still shall ring
And tribute to their graves be brought
In lavish bloom of spring.

Fired First and Last Shot.

It is a fact not generally known that the man who fired the first gun in the civil war killed himself with another shot not long after the close of the conflict. Edmund Ruffin, who opened the bombardment of Fort Sumter by firing the first cannon shot, owned a large plantation on the James river, with many slaves. He was an old man, but intensely loyal to the south. By the fortunes of war his estate was ruined. So disappointed and humiliated was Ruffin by the failure of the southern cause that on the 17th of June, 1865, at Amelia Court House, Va., the old man loaded a musket and killed himself.

Fired From Fort Sumter.

Dr. V. Hunsford Ford of Washington recently gave the National museum a forty pound cannon ball fired from Fort Sumter during the opening engagement of the civil war.

HE EXPLAINED.
There were half a dozen colored men sitting together on the depot platform, and by and by one of them asked of the man they all seemed to look up to:
"Mistab Johnson, kin you tell me why presidential year alius hurts de business of de kentry?"
"Yes, sah; I reckon I kin," was the ready reply.
"Am it becase all de folks am so busy votin'?"
"No, sah."
"Am it becase everybody am so busy talkin'?"
"No, sah. Mistab Smith, dat question of yours has puzzled a heap of nars. It puzzled me fur years, but I dun figured it out at last. Ebery year, when we elect a president, business falls off. Why? Why hain't dat year same as odder years?"
"Yes, why?" echoed the others.
"Bease, Mistab Smith and gentlemen, becase of de lack dat we don't exactly know what de new president am gwine to do arter he am in dat White House and has got a free swing. When he gits dar he may say to Congress:
"Gentlemen, de price of bacon orter come down to seven cents, and de price of co'nmeal orter be cut in half."
Here followed a pause of 30 seconds, and then Mr. Johnson finished:
"Or he may dun stand up befo' dat Congress and wave his arms around and say:

The Missing Men.
At the late Publishers' Convention held in New York city the following questions were asked of various editors:
"What has become of the funny man who used to write about the mother-in-law dropping in unexpectedly on the family?"
"What has become of the mythical chap who used to come out in the fall with a tale of putting up the coat stove, and in the spring with a tale of moving it up stairs, down stairs or into the back yard?"
"The man who wrote about the railroad sandwich—where is he? Where is the sandwich? Where are the graves of those who laughed themselves to death over his joke always the same joke?"
"And the man who used to convulse the country with his story of running across

The funny man.
the back yard of a dark night and sawing his neck on a clothesline—is he living or dead? Did he at last saw his own head off on that much-used clothesline?"
"And there was the husband who helped clean house in the spring and started to move a bureau up or down stairs. It always got the better of him about the middle of the stairs, and with one wild yell to his wife he was rolled over and over and made a creek of. Where is he now?"
"And the man who decided that the cellar needed whitewashing and started in so bravely, to get his eyes filled with the compound at the third stroke of the brush and lay it off on his wife? Is he here with us yet?"
"And the man who tried to hang a screen door? And the man who did some spring painting? And the man who tried to get a barrel of vinegar down cellar unaided? Where are they? Have you seen them of late? Do you know where they can be found?"
And each and every publisher appealed to shook his head in a sad and solemn way and let a tear roll down his cheek in memory of the good men gone.

ROMANCE AND REALITY.
In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.
In the spring the snows and torrents quickly tumble from above.
In the spring the maiden's vision many a picture sees:
In the spring she soaks and shivers, splash and spatter, sneeze and freeze.

JOB KERR.

All For the Best.
I had been very courteously received by the ruling power of one of the South American States, and after we had talked for an hour I ventured to touch upon the matter of revolutions.
"I am afraid you people of the United States do not understand us," he replied with a deprecatory smile. "Those revolutions are brought about with the best intentions in the world, and most of them are for the best interests of the state."
"I don't exactly understand," I said.
"Nothing can be plainer, Senator. For instance, we have a president whose foreign policy is criticized by our press. One of our generals reads those criticisms and believes them to be well founded, and he says to himself:
"I can do better than that, and I will

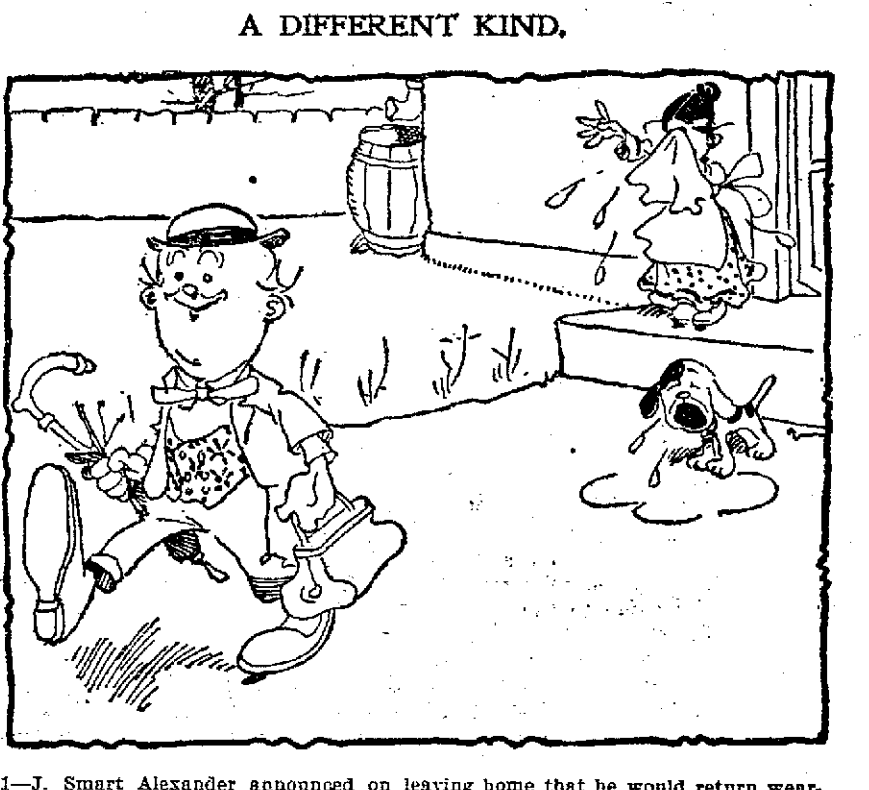

Received me cordially.
proceed to make myself president."
"He consults with a score of his friends and starts a revolution, and in a week or a month he is president. His foreign policy may suit the people and escape criticism, but some newspaper announces that the taxes are too high. Some statesman reads the criticism and says to himself:
"Yes, that is so, and I will become president and lower them."
"He mentions the matter at the club, a revolution takes place and behold we have a new ruler. He will last until someone becomes dissatisfied with the custom duties and then he goes. It is that our people are always looking for the choicest and the best, you see."
"And you will go out as other Presidents have?"
"Surely, Senator."
"And less your head?"
"Undoubtedly."
Nothing more was said on the subject, but at breakfast next morning I was told that there had been a revolution during the night, and that Don Blank had been swept out and another Don swept in. Also, that Don Blank had been shot and buried two hours before. It was all for the best, however.

THE WAY OF A KING.

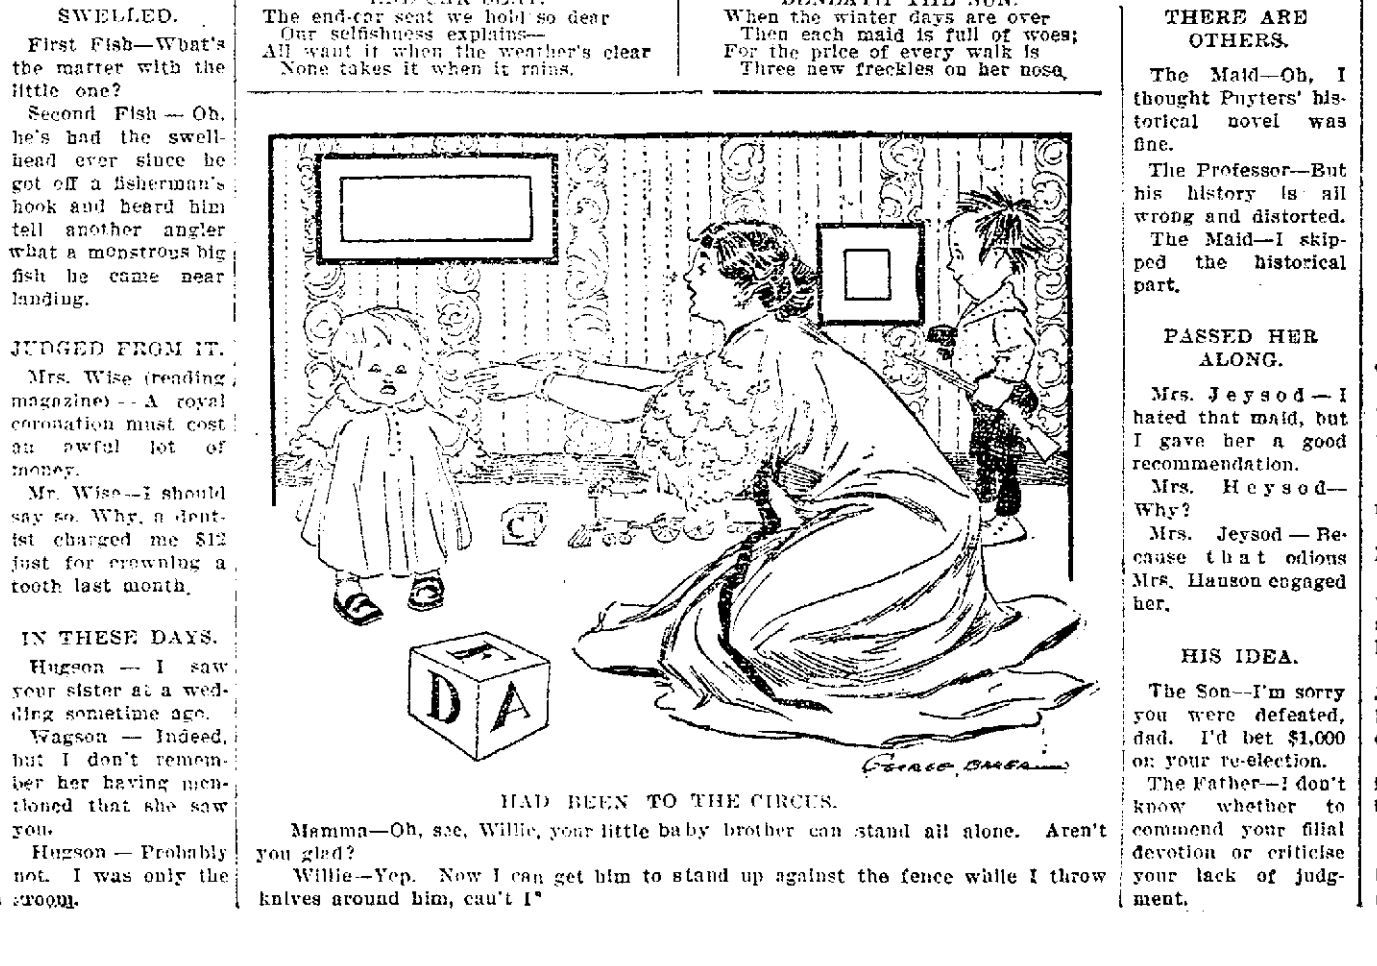

On sitting down to breakfast one morning the King discovered that there was no claret on the table, and throwing his robe of state around him he walked into the room of his Prime Minister and thundered:
"By the great hornspoon, Mustapha
"But you have none to sell."
"Then I command that all taxes be doubled for a year."
"Alas, Noble Ruler, it would do no good. The people are so hard up that there can be no more squeezing."
"But the crown jewels?"
"They were pawned three months ago."
"Muholland, does what I say go?" asked the King after thinking the situation over a bit.
"Sure, Your Majesty."
"Then you tell the cook to have string beans and buttermilk for dinner, and fall not on his life!"
JOE KERR.

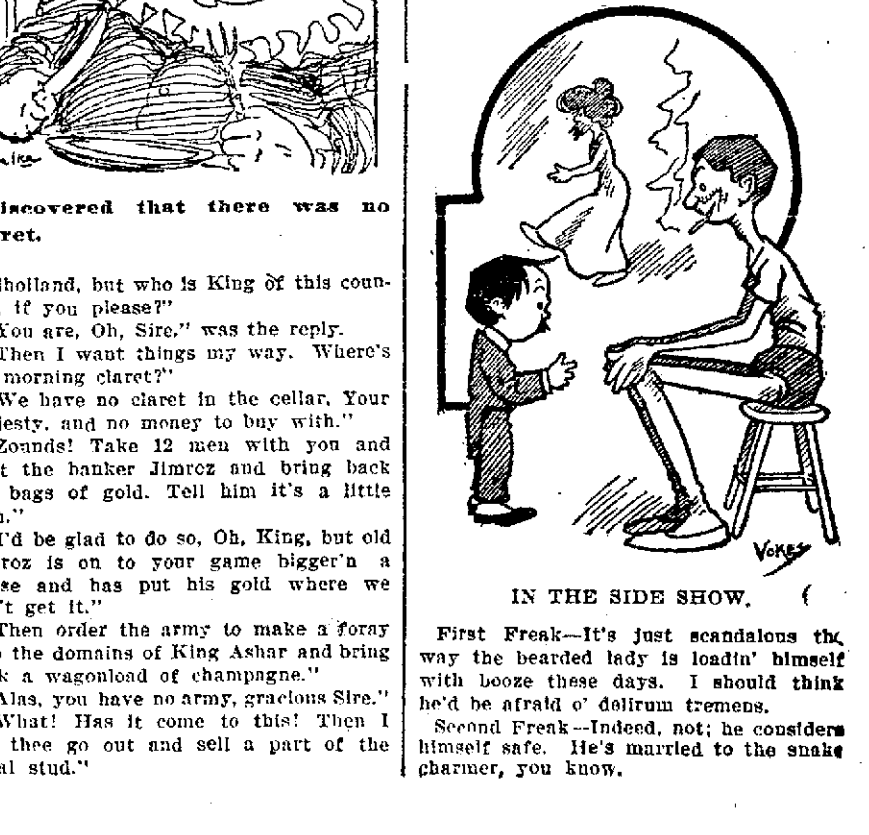

Discovered that there was no claret.
Muholland, but who is King of this country, if you please?"
"You are, Oh, Sir," was the reply.
"Then I want things my way. Where's my morning claret?"
"We have no claret in the cellar, Your Majesty, and no money to buy with."
"Zounds! Take 12 men with you and visit the banker Jimroz and bring back six bags of gold. Tell him it's a little loan."
"I'd be glad to do so, Oh, King, but old Jimroz is on to your game bigger'n a house and has put his gold where we can't get it."
"Then order the army to make a foray into the domains of King Ashnar and bring back a wagonload of champagne."
"Alas, you have no army, gracious Sir."
"What! Has it come to this! Then I bid thee go out and sell a part of the royal stud."

$10,000,000 WORTH OF FIGHTING SHIPS

IN A RACE FOR SPEED HONORS

HOW THE ST. LOUIS "LAME DUCK" OF THE SECOND PACIFIC SQUADRON WON IN AN EIGHT HOURS TEST OUT OF MAGDALENA BAY.

BY DR. ROBERT A. BACHMANN OF THE ST. LOUIS

LET'S SHOW THEM. WE CAN SHOOT, YES, AND WE CAN GO SOME, TOO!

motion of a feather sinking gently through the air.

Simultaneously the other two pennants came down. The captain put the arm of the engine room annunciator hard over to "full speed ahead." There was a clanging of gongs and the answering pointer moved by an unseen hand, described the same arc, stopping at the same space. The race was on.

The sea was calm and black, rippled in patches by a slight breeze, not strong enough to dispel the three lines of smoke that fell over the horizon behind. All the motion of the ship came from within. The Milwaukee was ahead a length, the St. Louis and Charleston abeam.

The stimulus of a hundred yards gained or lost could not be felt by the men below working in the cellars of the ship. Down there the real race was being run. The speed depended on the engines, the engine on the boilers and the boilers on the men who kept the furnaces alive with coal. The heat in the engine room was intense. Officers and enlisted men, indistinguishable in undershirts, overalls, dungarees and caps, driving with oil and water, their faces glistening, moved around with a shuffling gait over the slippery deck, squirting oil here and there, feeling the heat of bearings and taking data on oil bespattered sheets.

It was almost impossible to talk. The thump of the engines and pumps and the vibration of the ship mixed with the hiss of escaping steam, with the rumble of the shaft and the sound of dripping water. Oil and water showered from everywhere, covering the rails, eccentrics, floor plates and frames or braces with a yellow frost-like covering. In a minute your clothes and shoes were saturated. Nobody minded this a bit. Nobody noticed that you had to get within four inches of an board, having four cylinders apiece. These cylinders look like huge sleepers from which slim steel arms project gripping the crank shafts like an Italian turning his handiwork.

The precision and intelligence of the engines destroy their character as machines. They seem to know there is a race, and they turn the shafts with frantic energy—one hundred and forty times a minute. It seems too fast for the bulk, the strain too great for the bolts and plates. And forward of the engines are the pumps doing their share of the work, adding to the confusing array of rods, wheels, cylinders, valves, bolts and bearings—all in motion or assisting motion. The air pumps—ponderous, slow, deliberate; the hot well pump bringing each stroke to a close with a jerk; the main feed pumps, powerful, indefatigable, short of stroke; the little circulating pumps running like a sewing machine, anæsthetic, snappy, joyous and light, all striving to win this race, helping the long steel arms to shoot out of their sleeves and turn the cranks—one hundred and forty times a minute or more—invisible, silent, conscious, superior.

While the engines have been grinding out revolutions, there has been trouble on deck. The course has not been steered straight, and the wake looks slightly zig-zaggy. That has been corrected, however, and the steering gear works well again.

The ships are keeping their former positions rather well—the Milwaukee still in the lead, perhaps a little more than before. We are going twenty-one knots, and you know one of the race is to beat that presently and the race will be over. You can almost see into their engine rooms and watch the strained efforts of men and machines. How the time seems to drag! Too much is crowded into a minute.

Something happens. The Charleston is making a signal, and almost simultaneously she appears to be dropping behind. The excitement spreads in waves from the bridge to the quarter deck, every one begins talking, giving opinions and reasons. Somebody reads the signal and passes it along. The Charleston is now several lengths behind. The signal reads, "Have trouble with engines; disregard our movements."

The Charleston is beaten!

The perfect engine room has failed to stand the strain, or the long steel arms, perhaps, or one of the numerous pumps. Something went wrong at any rate, and there she is, five hundred yards behind. The race has narrowed to two. The Milwaukee is still in the lead and gaining slightly, ever so little, but gaining. What a spirit her men must have to work on to know their ship is leading and gaining, and her main rival out of the race!

Nothing to beat but the St. Louis. The incomparable "Sloper," built by the Union Iron Works, grandchild of the Oregon, contending the final phase of the race with the "Lame Duck," whose main feed pumps are irreparably bad.

"We beat the Charley," says one excited individual. "We want to beat the 'Sloper'! Resembles the Milwaukee on the outside," he quotes the San Francisco paper, "but was badly battered on her trip around. Let's show them. We can shoot, yes, and we can go some, too."

The idea still prevails that the St. Louis is not trimmed deep enough aft, and the crew go in a body and squat on the quarter deck several hundred strong.

away from the "Lame Duck," who insists on hanging on to the last knot.

Unexpectedly the head of the chief engineer pops up from the wardroom hatch. His face and hair are shiny with oil and water and his eyes are bloodshot. He remains where he is, feasting to soil the quarterdeck with the grease and water that are dripping from him. "Are we gaining any?" he asks, louder than necessary away from the din of his engine room.

"Not much on the whole," says the ensign, planning the rough truth for fear of the depressing effect. "How are the engines?"

"Fine, the pressure is too low. We can't get enough steam."

Steam, steam, always steam. His head disappears as precipitately as it bobbed into view. Back to the engine room he goes to check for trouble. Another thing, however, requires his attention. During his absence a main bearing has heated and is throwing off sparks. In an instant two hoses are playing streams on sparking ceases. Everybody heaves a sigh of relief; a hot bearing would mean the loss of the race. It will take a long time to cool the bearing sufficiently to render it all danger.

In the meanwhile the steam has dropped another five points. The chief slides across the oily deck in angry haste. A messenger from the deck halts him and hands him a message. It is from the navy knot less per hour than the Milwaukee.

He passes from the engine room through the double doored airlock forward into the firerooms.

What's the matter with the steam? he yells at the water tender. "Dig into it, dig into it. Ten pounds more and we'll walk away from her. The Charleston's hull down." He passes through into the other firerooms, four in all, and repeats the same words in each one. He also glances at the pressure gauges and sees two of the rooms are doing no work. In them he adds some words of encouragement.

The minute he disappears the water tenders urge on their men. Furnace doors fly open, men take the coal with coal dust, dripping with sweat that leaves little white streaks on their skin where it runs down, plunge their shovels fiercely into the heaps of coal on the deck and throw it far back into the furnaces. With a slam the doors fly shut again and the fireman runs his slice bar back over the grating, works the incandescent mass and pulls out the bar heated in that half minute to a white heat. That's the way it goes in every one of the firerooms—eight firemen to each room, all savagely tossing into the hungry furnaces the coal a crew of coal passers busily hauls in big iron buckets out of the bunkers. The heat is terrific, and when a furnace opens the fires roar, blown to a fury by the forced draught. The fireman has to protect his hands by a cloth, and sometimes his eyes by glasses and occasionally he jumps to the middle of the room for a brief second to catch a gust of the air the blowers are sending down.

An officer in dungarees has just come from the engine room. He begins shouting something before he is fairly in hearing distance. You finally make out his words as he approaches.

"We have gained fifty yards in the last half hour, and are now nearly abreast of the Milwaukee. Like the chief he has gone into all the firerooms repeating the message. The chief comes aft to go to the engine room.

If that hot bearing now will hold out!

VERY ONE is in high state of tension. A warrant officer stops the chief and says most seriously, "Do you remember that story in Herodotus where—"

The chief becomes oblivious at once and leaves him standing. Before he can reach the air lock another messenger reaches him. The note reads, "We have the Milwaukee on our quarter."

He goes right on into the starboard engine room to see what is happening to the hot bearing, and sees his first assistant sitting anxiously over it, oil can in hand, like a mother at the bed of her sick child.

The bearing has cooled. The first assistant says he is going to oil hereafter himself. "No use taking any chances. You can't depend upon your helpers these days any more at all. Why don't they get you more money, why? The navy," he says, "the chief nods, pats him on the back and runs back now to the fire room.

"Milwaukee on our quarter, we've got her. Keep it up!"

You should see the shovels fly now! The air becomes obscure with coal dust. Clack, clack, the doors fly shut all around. The men threw the coal like mud. They forget their thirst, the heat, some are losing their hand clothes—even their hats. The tramp on each other's feet, knock each other with bars and buckets unheeded. And the steam goes climbing up to 220, 225, 230 inches on the forward boilers, 240 and 260.

Cheer after cheer rises from the crew on the upper decks. The race looks won. Only an accident can lose. They know nothing of the hot bearing or the superhuman efforts to raise the steam. They only see the ship surging ahead and cheer.

At this stage of the race the Milwaukee unexpectedly drops her port speed cone to half distance, showing something untoward has taken place in her port engines. She falls behind as though anchored to the spot and in a few minutes is several miles in the rear. The St. Louis has just worked up to her speed, 21.7 knots, and continues as though there never had been a race—just a plain every day eight hour endurance run. The strange part of the whole race has been the evanescence of the excitement. The daily routine of the ship goes on now just as though the ship were steaming in squadron. Nobody talks much about the race.

The captain's chief concern seems to be about the amount of oil expended. "A thousand gallons!" she exclaims when he gets the report.

"What did you do with it all, Chief?" asks the ensign.

"I threw it overboard to make the way smooth for the others," answers the ensign in a tired sort of way. His interest has gone.

The little torpedo boat Perry, feeling her oats, chatting with the restriction of twenty-one knots, asks permission to make a sport. It is granted. She falls astern to twenty knots, firing by the seat of the pants laboring their way back through the water. It takes her just five minutes to come abreast and hoist a signal to the captain—"You're the winner!"—and drop back to her former position.

There is hardly an appreciable distinction of speed for the entire eight hours. The average is more than twenty knots an hour.

The only visible effects of the race on the ship are the drifts of cladders that have sifted all over the ship. On the quarter deck a boy is busy sweeping them in the waterway, and with each sweep he keeps time to a burst on the siren of the "Big Four."

She made it with her engine gone, and a band in the eight hour race, but now she's back on her feet, one by one, the "Lame Duck" of the squadron.

THE second squadron of the United States Pacific fleet is composed mainly of the Charleston, the St. Louis and the Milwaukee—sister ships, four stacks, built for twenty-two knots and costing more than three million dollars apiece.

The Neely & Levy Company built the St. Louis, Newport News the Charleston and the Union Iron Works the Milwaukee. The Charleston circumnavigated South America with Secretary Root aboard, and the St. Louis followed some months later to join her and the Milwaukee, put in commission about this time at the Mare Island Navy Yard.

From the time these ships got in squadron, with the Charleston as flagship, having Rear Admiral Swinburne aboard, the rivalry between them has been intense. The first six months there was nothing to it but the Charleston. She won everything—target practice, boat races and baseball—with an ease that made competition with her apparently useless. The Milwaukee, known as the "Sloper," was still a little new. The St. Louis was dubbed the "Lame Duck." The Charleston won about $5,000 from the St. Louis on a boat race, and she won a like amount from the Milwaukee on a baseball game. She defeated the Pennsylvania's crack baseball team, 4 to 0, at San Francisco; beat the "Lame Duck" by a neck at target practice and promptly adopted the motto, "Better than ever."

The St. Louis, beaten twice—not badly, but by just a small margin each time—thought it over and adopted the motto, "Pluck wins."

About this time the chief engineer reported unfavorably on some of the pumps and the ship went to Mare Island for repairs. She stayed there two months and prepared to go again to Magdalena Bay for target practice, where the Charleston and Milwaukee had preceded her. Before she left San Francisco one of the daily newspapers devoted two columns to describing her battered condition, due to the ravages of the trip through Magellan Strait. A day later epidemics of measles and mumps broke out. To add further trouble the pumps, though repaired, were not working well yet. Finally there were only two weeks to prepare for target practice. The news had come up from the other ships that the Charleston exceeded her last year's score and had tied the Maryland, the best of the "Big Four," with her six-inch battery. On the St. Louis some of the best gun pointers were on the sick list. The "Lame Duck" prospects were of a deep ultramarine with indigo trimmings.

NOW, after we beat them on the range," said the ordnance officer to the chief engineer in the wardroom one day, forgetting the limited time for preparation and the epidemics, "what can you do on the run?"

"If the pumps hold out we're all right," "But will they?"

"I've got men working on them day and night," said the chief with an air of finality.

Then the "Lame Duck" went on the range and promptly beat the Charleston a whole ship was loosing to shake with the rhythm of the shafts.

The officers on the quarterdeck were more critical. After a noticed the upparent lack of spirit in the Milwaukee. The wake extended back over the sea like a long triangle of tumultuous white soap suds, with its apex at the stern. The ship was loosing to shake with the rhythm of the shafts.

Look at the smokestack stars of the binoculars, which they put to their eyes. The only thing in your mind was the ship and steam and smoke and more steam. The race was on. The signal went along. The St. Louis was still in the lead and the Milwaukee a length behind. At a quarter to eight the signal went up for standard speed—that is, eighteen knots—and immediately the ships began to plough up the water carrying the familiar bone in their teeth.

THE Milwaukee seemed to be rooting deeper in the water than the others. The sailors on the St. Louis were quick to notice this.

"She's down too far by the head," said one.

"Look at the Charley," said another; "she's hardly making any form at all. No smoke from the forward stack either. He for the Charley in the race."

"Forget it," said his shipmate. "Do you see that?" pointing up to where the safety valve was lifting and the white steam mingled with the thick smoke from the stacks; "that'll bring home the bacon for the Budweiser ship all right."

IN HONOR OF CLINTON

Body of Vice President to Be Reburied at Kingston.

EXHUMED AT WASHINGTON.

Remains of New York's First Governor Will Lie Hereafter in His Home Town—Body Well Preserved, Although Buried Many Years.

The body of George Clinton, twice vice president of the United States and first governor of the Empire State, of which he was the executive for twenty-one years, was recently exhumed at the old Congressional cemetery in Washington and transferred to the United States Naval hospital in Washington, where it now lies, awaiting removal to the old Clinton home at Kingston, N. Y. The body was found to be in a most remarkable state of preservation in spite of the fact that it had rested in the leaden coffin for ninety-six years. The chemicals in the soil had seemingly petrified most of the upper portions of the body and head, and even the cloth of the coat and silk of the long stockings seemed to be as strong and substantial as when new, says a Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune. The granite monument which has so long marked the grave in the old cemetery has been taken down and started on its way to Kingston. The coffin will follow within a few days.

The exhumation was witnessed by Louis F. Ganet, a great-grandnephew of Governor Clinton; Benjamin M. Brink of Kingston, Chaplain R. R. Hoos of the navy, Brigadier General R. M. O'Reilly, surgeon general of the army, and Dr. Marcus Benjamin, one of the leading officials of the Smithsonian institution and president of the society of the war of 1812.

After workmen had been engaged for two weeks in removing the monument and its foundation and an excavation ten or twelve feet in depth had been made no trace of the coffin had yet been found. By the use of a pole driven in the earth as a probe, exactly after the method pursued by General Horace Porter in seeking for the body of Paul Jones and after considerable exploration, the metal box was finally struck at a depth of nearly twenty feet. The digging was then renewed and finished and the leaden box brought to light. It was immediately transferred to the Naval hospital, where Dr. O'Reilly presided at an autopsy. Measurements of Governor Clinton's skull were taken, and a minute examination of the entire body was made. The upper portions of the body were found to be in a better state of preservation than the lower, but considering the fact that the body had been in the coffin for nearly a century all agreed that its lifelike appearance was remarkable.

It is the intention of Governor Clinton's descendants in New York and New England to make the reburial the great feature of Kingston's Memorial day exercises. On that day the old town will celebrate its two hundred and fiftieth anniversary, and it will be a source of the greatest pride to all the citizens to be able at the same time to pay fitting homage to the memory of their most distinguished townsman.

If present plans are carried out the body of Governor Clinton will be accompanied to the Union station in Washington by an imposing military escort, led by General Bell, chief of staff of the army. In the procession will be representatives of patriotic organizations, companies of marines and soldiers from the various branches of the service and a large attendance of government officials and private citizens. President Roosevelt has been invited to attend, and if he cannot be present will send a representative. The body will be accompanied from Washington by a guard of honor selected from the patriotic societies and will make the journey from the capital to New York city by train. The railroad company has signified its desire to transport the coffin as well as the monument to New York free of charge. At New York the coffin will be transferred to a revenue cutter and will probably be escorted up the Hudson by several torpedo boats. The transfer from the boat to shore and from shore to the cemetery at Kingston will be marked by appropriate exercises.

PAPER FROM SUGAR CANE.

Invention of Trinidad Planter May Revolutionize Industry.

A consular report, interesting in view of the wood pulp investigation now being conducted by a special committee of the house, has reached the state department from Consul General Guenther, at Frankfurt, Germany. It relates to the invention by a Trinidad planter of a process for the manufacture of a superior quality of paper from bagasse the dry refuse of sugar cane. It is stated that he has erected paper works in connection with his sugar factory at an expense of $85,000. The inventor claims that 84 per cent of the bagasse is transformed into paper pulp, and he believes that his invention will revolutionize the cane sugar industry, as it would be remunerative to plant sugar cane primarily for making paper, with the sugar as a byproduct. The cost of paper production by the process is said to be very low.

A RADICAL DEPARTURE.

The most popular illustrated weeklies and monthlies are produced at enormous cost. Competition for the work of the leading authors and illustrators has established a scale of expenses that is almost prohibitive. Yet in addition to its many attractive features The Chicago Sunday Record-Herald furnishes its readers with a Sunday Magazine which compares favorably with the independent periodicals in every way and has some merits peculiar to itself. The most famous writers and illustrators contribute to it. Fine paper and press work and handy size make it a pleasure to read this enterprising publication which marks a radical departure in Sunday journalism.

WILL YOUR ESTATE BE A BUNCH OF RENT RECEIPTS?

Is it not business to invest your earnings and keep them invested? Experience has proven that fortunes invested in real estate have remained intact through more generations than when invested in any other form of property.

For the head of the family the title to his home means the saving of rents and the possession of an asset constantly increasing in value. Values in real estate have been created by the growth of population. These are factors which tend to increase the demand for, and decrease the supply of real estate.

IDLEWILDE PARK.

Few of those who worship at the shrine of Correll fail to include an acquaintance with the book of "Thelma." It dramatization and its premiere naturally whetted the appetites of her constituents. The play brims full of sentiment. Its simplicity finds a direct avenue to the heart of the listener and with the exception of some overdrawn that must be perhaps unavoidably charged up to stage purposes a natural atmosphere is created. The Idlewilde production will be under the personal direction of Mr. George W. Paige, who staged the same play five weeks ago at the Casino Square theater, Boston, one of the largest stock theaters in New England.

PRIZE OF A BOTANIST

Prehistoric Plant Found In Mexico by a Chicago Man.

ADVENTURES IN HIS QUEST.

Professor C. J. Chamberlain Survived Three Earthquakes and a Pursuit by a "Tiger," but Discovered the Dinosaur, a Plant of the Geological Period.

Thrilling stories were told by Professor Charles J. Chamberlain of the University of Chicago, who returned the other day to Chicago from a botanizing expedition in Mexico with remembrances of three earthquakes he passed through unharmed and an escape from a "tiger" which pursued him for an hour along a desolate mountain trail. The Chicago botanist has also returned with the prize he went to seek on behalf of the Botanical Society of America, the dinosaur, a species of the sago palm, which will furnish the little sprays of green that are worn in honor of Palm Sunday.

Professor Chamberlain rejoices far more over his triumph in bringing back the dinosaur than his success in surviving the earthquake and the tiger, says a Chicago correspondent of the Kansas City Star. The dinosaur is descended from the geological period and not until recently has it been known that any specimens of that rare and ancient plant were still in existence. But the university has been eagerly discussing stories which have leaked out about the professor's adventures.

"Three earthquakes are about enough for one trip," declared Professor Chamberlain, with a laugh, as he turned from showing a specimen of the dinosaur, a nut as big as a man's head, to his colleague, Professor Land. "I ran afoul of one at Puebla, another on the railroad between Puebla and Jalapa and the third at Mita."

"The quake which I passed over while riding on the train was scarcely noticeable to the passengers, although it did much damage to the surrounding country. The shock at Mita was much more disquieting. It came in the night and woke me out of a sound sleep. The first thing I felt when I woke up was the bed rocking and twisting under me. That didn't feel very pleasant, and it was not at all helpful in the comforting line to hear the brass candlestick on the table at the head of the bed dancing and clattering around as if it were bewitched."

"But the worst experience of all was at Puebla. The first I knew was that the floor began to tilt and undulate. I guess I was too green to realize that the proper thing to do when you get caught in an earthquake is to get out of doors and away from the danger of toppling walls, because I stayed right where I was and grabbed the edge of the door to keep from being swayed over."

"As the floor waved and the walls rocked the dishes and ornaments and pictures which the store was filled were thrown to the floor, dashing all around me. It certainly kept me pretty busy for awhile dodging the pieces and keeping on my feet. That was the quake which did so much damage to Jalapa. It threw down one house which was being built in Puebla and killed three men, who were buried under the falling walls."

"A little while after the earthquake at Puebla I was riding near Tuxtepec one night when I heard a noise made by an animal a little behind me, but a trifle to the right. I pulled out my knife, and my guide and I halted and faced the beast. It was black darkness, and we couldn't see six feet in any direction. The guide said it was a tiger and that we had better look out, but when we stopped the tiger did likewise. The chapparal was so dense that we couldn't chase the tiger, and it wouldn't do any good to stay in our tracks all night, so we went on. Then we could hear the tiger stalking after us."

"During the next hour we halted a dozen times when the beast got too close to us, and every time we stopped the tiger slunk back. It wasn't until we got right up to the village that the tiger ceased his pursuit."

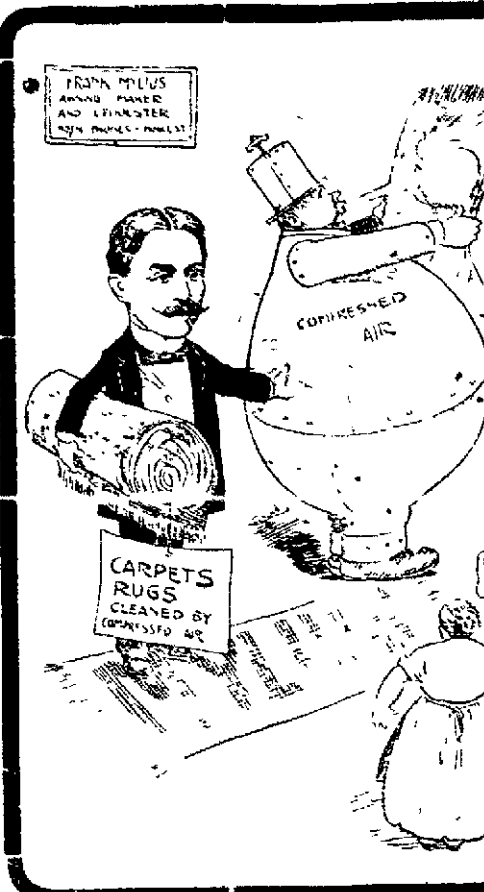

The nut of the dinosaur (pronounced dye-o-on, with the accent on the first syllable) which Professor Chamberlain brought back is covered with a greenish gray shell, possessing a fuzzy exterior. Inside there are about six or seven seeds, which are about as big as a plum, hard and look like old ivory. The only place where the dinosaur is known to have survived the destructive influences of the centuries is a primitive section of old Mexico, where the natives gather the nuts for the seeds, which they carve into whistles and toys.

Private Railroad For Farmers.

Six miles of railroad track between Shurway and Effingham, near Mattoon, Ill., abandoned about eight months ago by the Wabash railroad, because the business did not justify the heavy expenses of maintenance as being used in a novel way by the farmers who occupy adjoining land. Some of the mechanically inclined have constructed a sort of gondola band car with a long pole as propeller, and twenty can ride on the car at one time. It has been dubbed "the daylight limited" and on market days makes almost regular trips from end to end of the farmers' railroad.

Sanitary Carpet Cleaning

There is only one way that you can possibly get the dirt and dust from UNDER your carpets—TAKE THEM UP. Disease germs thrive in dust and dirt and a method that merely cleans the dust from the TOP of your carpet should be shunned, for the dirt remains under the carpet, consequently your floor and paper are in an unhealthy condition. We take your carpet up—put it on a wire screen floor, apply 80 pounds of compressed air to the SQUARE INCH ON BOTH SIDES OF THE CARPET—result, a perfect clean carpet. Then scrub your floor and clean or renew the papers—then, and then only, will your carpet and room be PERFECTLY CLEAN and in a SANITARY CONDITION. FLOORS CANNOT BE PUT IN A SANITARY CONDITION WHILE THE CARPET REMAINS UPON THE FLOOR—however, if you want your carpet merely brightened on top, without being taken up from the floor, we will do it for 50 cents a room. Phone us right now and let us clean your carpet RIGHT.

The Poultry Yard

The deadly louse is at work. Do not expect the stock to thrive without any green food. June is a hot month; do not neglect the supply of fresh water. Look out for rats. Do not allow them to have any hiding place near the coops.

Cut down the quantity of heating food in the ration such as corn, and feed plenty of green stuff. If you give your hens plenty of mixed feed, so arranged that they can sort it over, they will balance their own ration.

Placing slatted racks over the water troughs is a good way to keep the festive ducks from wasting their drink-water.

Put everything drinkable into shallow vessels. Fix it so that the chicks can drink and still not get their feet into the water or milk.

Don't be afraid to give the chicks all the sour milk they will eat. Good for them. If there is anything better I have never found it.

Are your chicks bothered with gapes? Well, spade up a portion of the yard each morning and induce the chicks to burrow in the freshly-turned earth, rather than to allow them access to the rotten wood yard, where the trouble lies.

Now is the time when the roosts of most hen houses are more or less alive with the terrible little mites. In kerosene we have a cheap and never-failing remedy. Soak the roosts with kerosene from time to time; or, still better, spray it all over the inside of the house.

A SURGICAL OPERATION

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letters.

Mrs. Barbara Base, of Kingman, Kansas, writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "For eight years I suffered from the most severe form of female troubles and was told that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has saved my life and made me a well woman."

Mrs. Arthur R. House, of Church Road, Moorestown, N. J., writes:

"I feel it is my duty to let people know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles, and last March my physician decided that an operation was necessary. My husband objected, and urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day I am well and strong."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, and backache.

HIDDEN WATER

LOCATED BY GOVERNMENT GEOLOGISTS AT DEPTH OF 3,000 FEET.

Flow Amounted to Half Million Gallons Per Day, Under 75 Pound Pressure.

Washington, May 30.—Only the seventh son of a seventh son is popularly supposed to have the gift of hidden water knowledge. With is witch-hazel wand he locates wells or underground channels to a depth of 40 feet or a little more. He holds his forked switch in both hands and circles about, and when he crosses above a vein of water the butt of the switch bends downward with irresistible force, thus locating, as by very magic, the spot at which he advises the digging of the well.

Government geologists smile at the claims of the born water-finder with the witch-hazel wand; nevertheless, they do a little well-finding themselves once in a while, but based on geologic knowledge of water-finding gravels and rock-formation, nor are they limited to forty or even hundred feet depths. What would have been thought a century ago of a man predicting that water would be found in a certain spot at a depth of 3,000 feet? He would have been pronounced either a consummate liar or, if he were so unfortunate as to live to see his prophecy fulfilled, he would have been deemed a fit subject for burning at the stake. Yet the fulfillment of a prediction of this sort is exactly what has occurred in an instance just made public by the United States Geological Survey.

The Black Hills region of South Dakota is a dry country, and the water supply problem is in many cases a serious one. Several years ago the Burlington railroad, which runs through the south end of the Black Hills, concluded to sink a well and applied to the United States Geological Survey for advice as to the underground conditions. N. H. Darton, a survey geologist, who has spent some years studying the geology of the Dakotas, made the prediction that the region of the proposed well site was underlain by water-bearing sandstones which, at a depth not greater than 3,000 feet, would probably furnish a good supply. So the well was bored.

Water was found at a depth of 2,900 feet, the flow amounting to half a million gallons a day, under a pressure of 75 pounds, giving an ample supply for the railroad's needs and constituting one of the most noteworthy artesian wells of the country. Several times the projectors of the enterprise were on the point of giving up the work, but they were urged to continue, the geologist being confident that the prospects warranted hoping to the lowest stratum.

Officials of the survey are priding themselves on this achievement as showing the economic importance of their underground water studies and to what extent science may be depended upon to point the way for the practical development of natural resources.
